Enterprise Reaches Fiftieth Anniversary

the present one being the longest, so far as is known, in the paper's history.

Highest Tribute Probably the finest tribute the newspaper ever received came in the form of ten words from an original subscriber. He was A. B. Canfield, and his last address before he died a few years ago, was 1018 Military Avenue, Detroit. For decades he had been a subscriber to The Enterprise, and though his sight failed badly toward the end, he still insisted on receiving the paper and having it read to him when he could no longer see well himself. The depression beginning in 1929 swept away nearly all he had, as it did to many elderly people. But, in spite of these circumstances, The Enterprise on October morning a few years ago received his ten-word message written in falling hand and now treasured on the office wall, a prized possession: "My shoes need new soles—but I gotta have The Gimlet."

Power Plan Unique The Enterprise is probably the only newspaper in Michigan which was issued weekly over a long period of time with the aid of electric current from the old Detroit United Railway electric system but without this coming to the knowledge of the management of that system. Quite a number of papers undoubtedly utilized power from the electric plants which the railway had in the various towns decades ago—in fact, the town lighting was often done by "the D.U.R." But in the case of The Enterprise, the car line ran within a few feet of the press, and so a facile-minded publisher just hooked on to the line and had his press operated that way—sans meter, sans bills.

It is an interesting circumstance that just as The Enterprise marks its 50th anniversary, what remains of the former D.U.R. goes through another phase of its similarly-checkered history. The Eastern Michigan Motorbuses, offshoot of the former street railway company, has recently been sold to the Greyhound Lines, and the actual new ownership is a matter of mystery, for it is not yet known whether Greyhound has purchased for itself or will act as a managing company for perhaps one of the large railroad systems.

But it was verified a few years ago that the former railway actually did supply the "juice" for the community's press, and portions of the old track running within a few feet of the corner of the building may still be seen at the surface of the ground near one corner of the present Enterprise building.

In addition to its many changes of ownership, the publication has experienced many events of unusual nature over a period of half a century. Unless calculations are in error, it is the oldest business institution in the community. It has experienced several removals of location, and at one time a fire destroyed valuable records and equipment.

Through many such circumstances, and no doubt through more than a few difficulties solved (though perhaps many not so easily overcome as that early one of electricity), The Enterprise has, insofar as 50 years may be considered permanence, achieved the founder's ambition of "a permanent journal of progress."

FIGURES QUOTED ON OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

Lansing—Old Age Assistance recipients under Governor Murphy's administration are more than double the number receiving assistance during the Fitzgerald administration. Herman M. Pekarsky, Supervisor of the Bureau of Old Age Assistance, announced today in a statement replying to Republican criticisms of Murphy's relief policies.

"A systematic method is now used to determine the need of assistance," Pekarsky said. "Under the Fitzgerald administration over 5,000 needy applicants for old age assistance were denied assistance because of their refusal to sign over their property to the state."

"Records available to the general public (and to Mr. Fitzgerald) show that in the last month of the Fitzgerald administration, December, 1936, there were 32,705 aged recipients receiving assistance. The total old age assistance expenditure for the month of December, 1936, was $538,529. The average grant per aged person was $16.35.

In March, 1938, under Governor Murphy's administration, there were 13,150 aged recipients receiving assistance. The total old age assistance expenditure for the month of March, 1938, was $1,342,153. The average monthly grant per aged person was $13.82 or an increase of $2 per aged person per month.

The total amount expended under the Fitzgerald administration during the fiscal year of 1936-37 amounted to $7,073,415, and the average monthly grant per aged person was $16.57.

Under Murphy for the fiscal year of 1937-38, a total of $13,821,250 was distributed to aged recipients, with an average monthly payment of $13.56 per month or $2 more than the previous year.

Local Woman's Club To Have Unique Roll Call

The Farmington Woman's Club will meet Wednesday, November 2, at the home of Miss Meriah Andrews. Roll call will be answered by having members give the names of current books, and their authors. As a program feature, Mrs. Ruth Miles will give a review of the book, "The Citadel," by A. J. Cronin.

At the meeting of the club last Wednesday members motored to Detroit, lunching at The Whittier, and then making a tour of the Peavable Pottery plant. They observed how pottery was formed in various shapes, the different types of glazes used, the making of tile, and all the many kinds of vases and other ornaments. Although the attendance was small, due to illness and adverse weather conditions, it proved to be a most worthwhile and interesting afternoon.

Miss Zelda Steele, in company with Mrs. Elsie McCullough and Mrs. Mabel Leonard, drove to Grand Rapids last week to attend a two-day meeting of the W.C.T.U. Miss Steele went to Ovid from there, and is visiting relatives this week.
