"BREEZE out of it, will you, ma, and lend me a stamp? Atta girl! Oh, I know, Sweets, you are tired, and wish I would stay at home for once and help out, but gee, Ma, think of my lily-white feed hocks! They'd look like raspberry hocks if I followed in your tracks for an hour. Housework is your life, Ma; you like it. I hate it. Now, why should I deprive you of the greatest joy in life?"

"I'm writing to the beauty prophet in the 'News' for some expert advice. Jimmie told me last night that my arms were like pharman wings. I can't stand wide cracks like the frog anyone, especially Jimmie. If I can't make that Romeo, I shall die unloved and unwept."

"Don't bluster, lambkins; I know what you are about to spill, but this Sybil is paid for divulging her secrets, and we pay for the paper to profit by her knowledge. No stunts! Oh, Ma, now I will have to hoof way up to the corner to get one."

"There he is now. Let him in like an angel and amuse him for a minute while I slip into this ounce and a half and put my lips on. And Ma, please don't tell him that sweeping develops arms. . . . It puts domestic ideas into his head."

"Hey, there, Jimmie! Entertain Ma like a sugar, will you? I won't be a whiff getting ready. Atta boy!" The voice trailed off behind a banging door, leaving Ma and the uncomfortable Jimmie in a vacuum.

The boy broke the silence abruptly; tensely: "I want to marry Hope, Ma."

"You will need hope and faith, and courage to undertake such a contract, Boy."

"You do not understand Hope, Ma. She is sensitive, impressionable, spirited."

"You may marry Hope, James, with my blessing. I really like you, boy, and wish you happiness. Perhaps I can help you if life gets too confusing."

A few mornings later Hope read the answer to her letter in the beauty column conducted by the famous Maybelle Lejeune, and drew a painted sigh. No suffering was too great in the cause of beauty, so she took the broom and duster in her hand with the same spirit that Joan of Arc showed when she led her army on to victory, and began making a clean sweep.

When Jimmie called that evening Hope was sweetly reminiscing of her day's labor, seeming all that was housewifely and desirable. Her arms and back ached, but her cheeks were flushed with a natural rose bloom.

Hope was a glutton for punishment. The broom and the duster were her masters, and she blossomed under the strict training. Maybelle Lejeune had accomplished in one paragraph for Mrs. Dale what a lifetime of pleading could not have done. She was often to see those days with her hands folded quietly in her lap and a Mona Lisan smile playing about her lips. She had time to visit old friends, a pleasure she had denied herself for years.

One afternoon Hope decided to clean the attic. She had not been up those narrow, steep stairs since early childhood.

A locked door! Hope pecked through the slits in the unmatched board door. Typewriter! Curiosity had to be gratified at the expense of honor. Standing on an upturned chest, she wriggled over the top of the door where the partition did not meet the slanting roof. On a small table was scattered a realm of typewritten sheets, some carbon copy and many filled with rough notes.

One neatly piled bundle was signed in her mother's own handwriting:

BEAUTY SECRETS
By Maybelle Lejeune

On one sheet was the duplicate copy of the answer to her own letter.

Hope crept shamefacedly down the stairs, and when her mother returned the table was arranged for dinner and the evening and the roasting beef assailed her nostrils.

As Mrs. Dale innocently kissed her daughter, a happy, contented smile lit up her face, and she said, "Mother had won."

Diagonal light from above, from skylights, and from monitor windows is generally better than light from side windows only, according to industrial and engineering chemistry. Light from the north, in the northern hemisphere, is least likely to be hard and glaring.

"Book Learning" Necessary

Capt. John D. Craig Here
Nov. 30 For Town Hall

Direct from the most dangerous expedition of his career, Capt. John D. Craig, Hollywood adventure producer and deep-sea diver, will bring sensational new underwater movies to illustrate his talk, "Danger is My Business," before the Detroit Town Hall audience in the Flusher Theatre Wednesday morning, November 30, at 11 o'clock. A natural story-teller and showman, Capt. Craig has been hailed as one of the lecture "finds" of recent years. His book, "Danger is My Business," was a top best-seller for months.

Capt. Craig has returned from a summer on the Spanish Main with the only underwater movies ever made on the dreaded Silver Shoals, graveyard of treasure-laden Spanish galleons. In a deep-sea world made perilous by vicious man-eating fish, violent and unpredictable currents and jagged under-water obstructions, he pirate ships with legendary treasures buried in the holds. Fantastically beautiful coral forests—death traps to the unwary diver—grow on the floor of the treacherous reefs, 85 miles from land. Capt. Craig will show amazing moving pictures of these coral trees, the largest in the world, 40, 60, and 80 feet tall.

With his crew of daredevils, Capt. Craig has combed the world to make thrill sequences for Hollywood films. His spectacular pictures have won the coveted Academy Award.

More Than 5,000 Permits For Gas and Oil Wells

In scarcely a decade, more than 5,000 permits for gas and oil well drilling have been issued by the State, a summary of records in the geology division of the department of conservation shows. Approximately 34 per cent of the total number of permits have been issued during the last two years, testifying to the recent rapid growth of the comparatively new industry.

Since the beginning of 1927, the first year the law regulating the issuance of permits became effective, 5,654 permits have been issued, up to Nov. 1 of this year. The number issued up to that date this year and in 1937 totals 1,777. Permits for drilling have been issued for territory in 69 counties while oil or gas is now being commercially produced in 15 counties.

On Sept. 15 this year, 52 pools or fields were producing either oil or gas, or both.
