Celia Seems Dumb

By GLORIA SINGLAR
Associated Press Wire Service.

CELIA DRAYTON's coming to Farmington was heralded by considerable excitement in what fondly believed itself the "youngest city." Dashedville was fast emerging from villagehood and was eminently city-conscious. Celia came from New York. All the girls were prepared for a sophisticated.

A few came over to her aunt's farm to see her the very first evening. They found a pretty, healthy girl with a markedly simple straightforward manner.

"Dumb, she seems to me," said Violet Ray, who was in normal school, was too thin and had no "steady" boy friend.

"I've come down here to play tennis, get some swimming in a really truly lake and will in the sunshine," huffed Celia to her aunt later. "I simply won't be intruded into bridge parties or indoor waste time. Yes, dearest aunt, you may give one dance for me, only I really want to live in the lake, excepting when I'm on the tennis courts."

"Evidently she can't play bridge, I guess she's not used to a card game either. And, gosh, that dress had no style at all. You might buy it anywhere. I thought from what Mrs. Weber said her niece was something marvelous."

"Darn good looking," said the boys, hoping their tennis would pass muster.

Mrs. Webber laughed. "Never mind, Celia," she said. "I want them to see you dance—that's why I'm giving a dance for you. They're all run silly with trying to be what they believe New York is. They're just babies with new toys. Your uncle can't stay in the room when Milly Bait tries to smoke. He says she looks just like 'Gueydyne' Tame Chimpanzee who smoked at the last circus. I know you'll forgive them if they try to snub you. If they know who you were they'd crowd at your feet."

"But all I want is for them to be kind and friendly," said Celia, stretching her well-modified arm. "I'm simply spoiling for a swim."

"Did I tell you that Wyatt Fischer is coming tomorrow?" asked Mrs. Webber. "He's a fellow who lives in Paris. He has been offered a position in the state office in Philadelphia and we think he will go far."

"I knew him—a little—in New York," and Celia blushed slightly. "Well, he won't tell you how young people a word until he says he may—about anything," she said, vaguely.

"There isn't anything to tell," said Celia, "excepting that I am on the stage."

The farmhouse made a lovely setting for Mrs. Webber's dance. It was filled with fine old furniture and boasted wide rooms which had been recently floored with polished oak. Celia looked lovely in a simple pink dress that none but her aunt knew bore a Paris label.

The room was filled with some good jazz musicians giving their best. And in the middle of the evening young Wyatt walked in and smiled at Celia.

"So you're really back," was all she said.

"And with a real job," he replied meaningly, as she glided out on the floor.

"Gosh, she can dance all right," said Violet, powdering her unbecomely nose.

"I'll say she can. But she has no line," responded Mildred Bait, who was short-winded and clumsy.

"Line nothing! She's got 'it,'" declared Polly Dawson, a freshman at the state university, good looking and a first-class athlete.

After a delicious supper Mrs. Webber, who loyed young people and knew how to make an evening happy, rare and nothing to Celia, said: "We have tonight been celebrating my little niece's engagement to Wyatt Fischer, who you all know is coming tomorrow. Centennial registered on almost all the girls' faces. 'You little like to hear that dear little Celia is 'Isolde' the dancer whose picture I know you've seen in the rotogravure sections of your Sunday papers. She will be married by my home Tuesday night. Now, Celia, have you anything to say, dear?"

"Only that I do hope you will like me, for I am going to live here in the summer home. You see, Wyatt knows you and I don't." The sweet, gentle voice went on: "I feel lonely from among you, for I am the only stranger."

Polly Dawson jumped up and ran to Celia and hugged her. "We'll be friends, for your service is fine and you can dance and you can swim." Every one laughed, for all loved impulsive Polly. "And we won't give a darn for the cats she whispered naughtily in Celia's ear."

Iron Will Float
It is usually said that iron will not float, but it will. A ball of iron placed in a pan of liquid mercury will float and even support other weight on top of it. Stones and other heavy objects will also float in mercury. The reason is that mercury has a specific gravity of 13.59, while that of iron is 7.84. Iron will not float in water because the specific gravity of water is 1, so that an equal volume of iron is 7.84 times as heavy as water.

The Saginaw river drainage system is the largest in the State and drains a region about equal to the combined areas of Connecticut and Delaware, or about 5,246 square miles.
