A Buying Guide

Before you order a dinner in a restaurant, you consult the bill-of-fare. Before you take a long trip by motor-car, you pour over road maps. Before you start out on a shopping trip, you should consult the advertisements in The Enterprise. For the same reasons!

The advertising columns are a buying guide to you in the purchase of everything you need--including amusements! A guide that saves your time and conserves your energy; that saves useless steps and guards against false ones that put S-T-R-E-T-C-H in family budgets.

The advertisements in this paper are so interesting, it is difficult to see how anyone could overlook them... fail to profit by them. Just check with yourself and be sure that you are reading the advertisements regularly--the big ones and the little ones. It is time well spent... always.

Spring Fires Of Questioned Value
"All forest growths are more rapid if fires are kept out, for our experiments reveal fertility is burned out of the soil. Fires destroy the habitat and food supply of resident game and insectivorous birds and small game animals. High winds act as a continuous and serious threat to human life and property even with the closest possible supervision of the fires. This together with its apparent uselessness in belighting the productivity of an area, finally condemns the practice of spring burning," according to Stewart.
But this spring, and with every returning spring, the fire will probably burn. There are several reasons, say the farmers of this area, why the fires are burning.
"Around my place I burn off the dead stub along the roadways and places where I don't farm, because it's of no value if plowed under," explained Will Morris whose farm is at Twelve Mile Road and Drake Road.
"I use fire to burn off the grass that grows by the roads because when it's cut it comes up again sooner," Jay Patton said. "I plow under organic material, however, in the areas I cultivate," he said, "nearly all the time I burn off the Twelve Mile Road and Haggerty highway."
Much the same reasons for spring burning were given by Ernest Haggerty whose farm is on Grand River near Halsted. He added that he uses fire to clean out areas not used for cultivation. Harold T. Bailey, who has a farm on Twelve Mile Road between Halsted and Haggerty finds burning about the only method effective in the removal of grass weeds, which forms a mat that prevents other things from growing. He said he wouldn't think of using fire for a fieldwood.
Unless the conservationalists are able to demonstrate that the time saved by burning, instead of cutting grass and brush, is not worth the loss of wildlife, spring burning will probably remain a custom among farmers.

Eggs For Research Hatched at M. S. C.
Pre-Easter hatching of 1,000 eggs has placed in operation the facilities of the new federal poultry disease research laboratory on the campus of Michigan State College.
The hatching which will set each week to provide a total number of 6,000 chicks are designed for an intensive study of the causes of fowl paralysis which is taking an estimated 25 per cent toll annually from the farm flocks of the 25 million chickens in the United States which the laboratory is to serve.
Half of the chicks are to be used in pathology or disease inoculation studies. It is explained by Dr. J. Holmes Martin, director. The other half of each hatch is to go to genetic studies to locate individuals which can be used to establish susceptible and resistant strains.
Eggs are purchased from 10 different flocks from coast to coast in the nation, selected on the basis of quality breeding. Preliminary work includes only strains of White Leghorns to establish fundamental results are to be tested on other breeds by collaborating experiment stations at state colleges and universities in some of the 45 states which the laboratory serves.
Dr. Martin announces three appointments to the laboratory staff. Senior poultry pathologist is Dr. A. Brandly, who received degrees from Kansas State College, taught there, and who served three years as associate chief in animal pathology at the University of Illinois.
Another staff member is Dr. N. P. Waters, working as senior poultry research. He is a graduate of Connecticut State College with subsequent degree from Harvard and in the past eight years he has served as poultry geneticist at the Connecticut State College, and as director of the plant at J. P. Michael, transferred from the national federal research center at Beltsville, Md. Two additional aides are to report April 15 to work with Superintendent Michael.

Beginning of Olympic Games
The modern Olympic games began with an international athletic meet in the stadium at Athens, Greece, in 1896. This was made possible largely through the munificence of a wealthy Greek of Alexandria, George Aheroff, and the Greek national committee. Baron Pierre de Coubertin, a Frenchman and promoter of international good-will, was chiefly responsible for organizing the international athletic countries in 1896 to re-institute these games, to be held every four years in this country chosen by the committee. It is a counterpart of the ancient Greek Olympic festival, intended to contribute to the cause of sportsmanship and international friendship.
