

Cantor Opens Road Builders Show

A section of the road builders' association's 35th annual "Highways of Tomorrow" Convention-Exposition at San Francisco's Civic Auditorium. "This is the American way," said Mr. Cantor, "where men gather to plan roads for the enjoyment of people and not for the destruction of humanity." Mr. Van Wagoner is Michigan state highway commissioner.

THE FINEST TRANSPORTATION BLUE GOOSE LINES OVER MICHIGAN'S SCENIC HIGHWAYS

An extension telephone at your bedside provides the quickest means of summoning help in emergencies... fire, sudden illness, burglary.

It affords privacy, for yourself or guests, both in making and receiving calls. A convenience to every one, it is a real boon to convalescents. And it is of special value to the busy housewife, for it saves her the time and trouble of many tiring trips up and down the stairs.

You can have an extension telephone in any part of your home for less than 3 cents a day. To order an extension telephone, call, visit or write the Telephone Business Office.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY
You are cordially invited to visit the Bell System exhibit at the Golden Gate International Exposition, San Francisco, Calif.

Most of the snake gentry hereabouts are very handsomely patterned. The ringnecked snake, for example, is a shiny bluish black with bright yellow underparts and a brilliant orange ring around his neck. The pilot black snake has a black velvet skin. The ribbon snake would make a pretty fancy ribbon, with his slender dark body and three long yellow stripes. The green snake is as green as grass and the queen snake, which is found only in water, has nice chocolate brown stripes. The storer's or red-bellied burrowing snake is very small and gray with bright red decorations.

Each one has a personality of his own. Some are very mysterious and elusive, preferring to lead private lives under stones, bark and logs. Others move freely in the open fields. Some are happiest around swamps. Tree climbers like the pilot black snake hunt the heavy venals.

Panama City and Colon in Existence Before the Canal
Cristobal Canal Zone, Atlantic port of entry to a strip of leased territory across the narrow part of the Republic of Panama, is the gateway to a scene that dates back through the centuries. Panama City and Colon, ancient and colorful, and Cristobal and Balboa, modern and military, are easily available to the Caribbean traveler.

Panama City and Colon are not outgrowths of the accomplishment of the canal. They are cities founded four centuries ago, the former of a paved causeway built to carry the unworked riches of the conquistadores, with a legend of pirates, buccaners, and the freebooters of the Spanish Main. A virtual kaleidoscope of nations, they owe their atmosphere to a commerce that dates back to the Fifteenth century. The parade of nations began with the Spaniards and Negro slaves, Inca chiefs and native Indians was carried by the English buccaners, the French corsairs, the forty-miners, Hindus, Chinese and Arabs. Descendants of these early merchants pass through the streets today.

Sardine Varieties
All sardines are small fishes of the herring family. In California variety is noted in the living sardine (Sardinia caerulea); in Maine, the sea herring (Clupea harengus); in France and Portugal, the pilchard (Clupea pilchardus); and in Norway, the sprat (Clupea sprattus). The name is derived from that of the island of Sardinia, in the Mediterranean, around whose coasts the fish was first caught in quantity. The Americans states that the name is a general one applied to various small fishes of the family Clupeidae, as well as, and less correctly, to the young of some of the larger species. The usual French sardine is the yearling fish of what becomes, when full grown, the pilchard, 8 to 10 inches long. The large California sardine is also a true sardine, but in the Maine sardine industry, the young of the sea herring are packed.

Spice Center of the World
Zanzibar is an island 22 miles off the coast of Tanganyika in the Azanian sea, with a population of more than 1,500,000. Zanzibar is the chief spice center of the world, the bulk of the clove supply being grown there. It is estimated that 48,000 acres, with more than 4,750,000 trees are devoted to this industry. Next to clove growing is the copra industry, with 55,000 acres given over to 2,000,000 coconut trees. The island is governed by a sultan but is administered by a British resident. The British residency is the finest building in the town of Zanzibar, the capital of the island. Fishing gives employment to many natives. The island's only wild animal is the little gazelle. One of Zanzibar's suburban towns is called Bu-Bu-Bu, probably the only triple-named town in the world.

Modern Canning
Modern canning developed from the need for preserved foods to supply armies in the field. During the Napoleonic wars so many soldiers died from deficiency diets or slow starvation that the French government offered a reward of 12,000 francs to anyone who could develop an effective method of preserving food. The first canned food was put up in sealed glass jars which were heated in boiling water after they were sealed.

Tantalum
Tantalum is rarer than gold in the earth's crust. It was discovered in 1802, but was not used for many years. In 1903 to 1911 it was used for incandescent bulb filaments, but was later displaced by tungsten. It is remarkably resistant to acid corrosion. The world's supply of tantalum ore has come almost exclusively from Australia. Small shipments have been made from Africa and South America.

On grounds that her husband keeps 20 cats and allows them to sleep in the bed, Mrs. Charles Tidbury of London has applied for a separation order.

Redford Theatre

Described as the epic of a lawless, exciting era, "Jesse James," comes to the Redford for a stay of Friday through Monday. In it are Cyrene Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly and Randolph Scott.

To say that this picture is not accurate at an account of the life of the western outlaw, Jesse James, by no means reduces it to nothingness. Shakespeare in his historical plays at times devalued history from fact to make a better play, and many a historical novelist who depended largely upon his source material, modified slightly for the sake of having a better constructed story. If anything is the matter with this movie, it is probably that the facts are not devalued from enough!

THREE HEADED TROUT BORN IN HATCHERY

Among hundreds of thousands of baby trout now reaching maturity at State fish hatcheries was one, recently picked for posterity, which hatchery employes think died because it couldn't make up its mind. It had three heads.

Another of the little trout was born with a head at both ends which also probably resulted in considerable confusion when the trout tried to make up its mind as to which direction it would take.

Another came equipped with two tails, less of a handicap than an over abundance of heads.

These freaks, "monsters" they are called by scientists, represent only a very small percentage of the trout born at hatcheries but, because so many trout are raised by the State, a few are found each year. The three headed trout was most unusual, according to hatchery attendants, but trout with two tails are fairly common.

The deformed trout seldom live past the first few days of their life when their egg supplies them with food. They are too much handicapped in the struggle for food to have any chance of survival.

By different methods different men excel.

But where is he who can do all things well?

—Charles Churchill.
