Types of Obesity

There are several kinds of obesity, each associated with a particular cause and the type can be determined by observation of how the fat is distributed on the body. There are three types caused by dysfunction of the endocrine glands and in each case the glands are functioning below the normal level. When the cause is in the pituitary gland, there are heavy deposits of fat on the shoulders and pelvic girdles, the upper arms and legs will be heavily padded but the wrists and ankles will retain their trim outline. When the thyroid gland is at fault the fat is uniformly distributed all over the body, the wrists and ankles becoming thick. A hypogonadal obesity, the fat is concentrated from the waist to the knees, the ankles and the upper part of the body retaining their slimmest.
