

ASLEEP IN PHONE BOOTH, MAN IS LOCKED IN STORE

If James Robinson had to go to sleep, he certainly selected an opportune place when he chose a telephone booth. For when he needed to be rescued, all he had to do was to reach for the telephone and call the police.

The telephone booth is located in a drugstore on Elm street in Farmington. James Robinson is a taxicab driver. Robinson entered the booth one night recently at 11 A. M. After having worked for several hours, he went to sleep. Meanwhile, the employees of the store locked it up and went home, not realizing any more than did Robinson that the taxicab driver was in the store. The last driver next for some two hours, and when he woke up and found he couldn't get out, he went back to his temporary bedroom and telephoned to the police. Patrol cars came on the scene, but they had to wait the arrival of the chief pharmacist, with a door key, before Robinson could be released.
