Oil Shale
Oil shale, a sedimentary deposit in which hydrocarbons are tightly locked in the rock structure, contains an oil reserve of 800 billion barrels, equivalent to a two-hundred years' supply. It would, according to an authority, produce enough gasoline to run all the motocram in the world for four hundred years. The United States possesse more than a third of this reserve. Chicago is built on such a street. n which bydrocarbons are tightly ocked in the rock streture, on the control of th
