

Urgent Care In Stops On Xways

Have you ever had a flat tire or motor trouble on a busy highway at night? If so, you've been through a pretty frightening experience.

Stopping at the side of the road can be quite dangerous, warns Donald C. Bolton, Michigan regional manager of an area insurance company, who urges all motorists carry high-way warning flares and know how to use them.

"Properly used flares can be an important safety aid," says Bolton, "but poorly placed flares can be a hazard to on-coming drivers, possibly even more dangerous than no flares at all."

"The two most important factors that must be taken into consideration when placing flares on the highway are the grade and curve of the road and the speed of approaching vehicles," warns Bolton.

"At least three flares should be used in such a way that adequate warning is provided and vehicles are guided around the emergency area. The line of flares should be long enough to allow approaching vehicles to slow down with the least possible difficulty."

BOLTON ADDS the following suggestions for those who find themselves in a daytime emergency situation on the road:

- Get your car off the road, as far to the right as possible.
- Use your emergency flasher lights, if you have them. If not, use your parking lights.
- Bail out the car's hood and trunk lid to alert other drivers.
- At night:
- Very cautiously set out your flares at once. They will serve to warn other motorists and signal for help.
- Don't add a fire to your troubles. Avoid placing lighted flares near spilled gasoline, brush or flammable products.
- When the emergency has ended, extinguish your flares and remove them from the road-way.

November Road Toll Hits High

Michigan traffic deaths in November soared to an all-time monthly high of 254, also topping the previous November record of 219 set in 1941, State Police provisional figures show.

The November toll was nine more than the previous high of 245 for any month set in December of 1965. It was also 40 more than 214 for November a year ago. November's average was 193 for the five years of 1963-67.

November's deaths brought the state's accumulated count for 11 months to 2,177 which was 254 or 13 per cent greater than 1,923 for the same period last year.

The Michigan toll for all of 1967 was 2,123. With state road deaths this year averaging about 6.5 daily, it appears Michigan is destined to set a new annual fatality mark in traffic for 1968 to surpass the present high of 2,298 in 1966.
