Music Hath Charms

By OSCAR MEADOWS.
(Associated Newspapers.)
(WVU Service.)

ROGER BROWN's face was puzzled and he did not, as we pause at the end of the street to wave to his wife: "She actually seems to try to think up ways to spend money," he thought grimly, "What nonsense! She wanted a house and I bought her one, now she's got to be satisfied."

At the station he bought a paper and paid 75 cents for two high-class magazines, but he did not read. Instead he stared moodily at the flying landscape.

"A wonderful morning, Brown," said a tired looking man of 35 years, his eyes upon a cottage with a steep tiled roof of Chinese blue. "I suppose this is an old story to you, but to me, after the dusty years in the city, it seems a miracle of beauty. You've lived here ten years, haven't you?"

"Yes," Roger's tone was filled with impatience. "Too, my wife was determined to get out of flat-life. She saved and scrimped, so determined was she to put every penny towards a home. I like to see well. I can see the money and I propose to spend it. She watched the advertisements and ran about constantly wearing the shabbiest of cloths," Roger's face was puzzled. "And finally she found our present home. I wasn't a bit anxious to tie myself up with payments and I hated to be far from the downtown theaters, but I gave in to her. I believe in being good to women and—"

Ben Miller looked at him in surprise. "But, aren't you glad that she saved you into buying? Your house must be worth much more than you paid for it?"

"It's doubled," returned Roger smugly. "And the children have improved vastly in the fresh air and freedom to play. I'm saving a tidy sum each month now that I've no rent to pay. I often tell Susie it's lucky for her that she got such a good provider."

"But if she hadn't scrimped you'd have still been paying rent."

"Oh, that's a woman's place to have. She's getting extravagant now. She's determined to have a radio. Says the children like music. I laughed at her but I really felt like scolding her."

Across the aisle were two women talking in low, affected voices.

"Yes, indeed," shrilled the one nearest the window. "I just told him if we spent Sunday in the suburbs I'd get interested in flowers and pets and all that and let him buy a house there and have Ethelinda home from school. None. Let the girl stay in boarding-school, where other people look after her. I want to be in my cozy flat where there's no responsibility. I'm out every night now, but he thinks just because he's on the road that I ought to sit in the house knitting."

"I should say not," returned the other, looking at herself critically in the mirror in the top of her square purse. "Ralph thought I ought to pay only $100 for my spring suit; said that was more than he could afford. Know what I did?"

"What?" queried the other, giggling and shifting her gum.

"Thanked him for the hundred, bought one that cost $175 and charged it. How's that for managing?"

"The old days of sitting at home saving and sewing have passed. I don't like to see her wear pretty things and enjoy herself. It was my fault," Miller put in loyally, but his companion noticed the worry lines about his eyes and the dispirited droop of his thin shoulders.

"Now she's delighted with her little house."

"My wife wants a radio," murmured Roger, forgetting that he had said this before.

Roger thought of the gold-banded cigars in his case. Susie, now that their house was paid for, never commented on his expensive habits. He frequently staid in town to go to theaters with his clients. He thought, too, of the $100 suit so glibly called "cheap" by his overdressed woman across the aisle.

"Why, my wife never paid $100 for a suit in her life," he said, scowling at Ben.

"You're a lucky man. A man's wife makes or breaks him. If a radio will make Mrs. Brown contented don't you think it's a small matter? Giving the children the best in life is fine. Think of poor Ethelinda," he added in a whisper, glancing toward the gum-chewer in her gaudy hat.

"Poor Ethelinda is right," chuckled Roger, suddenly complacent. He had chosen a worthy mate. "Guess I'll send out a radio today."

Parents Urged To Come To Cub Scout Meeting

The second meeting of parents of prospective Cub Scouts was held Wednesday evening at the high school and was well attended. However, there are a number of parents who have signified their interest in the project who were not in attendance. Any parent who wishes his boy to become a Cub Scout must attend these instructional meetings.

Mr. Stuart Nesbitt, a national representative of cubbing and Mr. Clifford Friend, of the Clinton Valley Council are the speakers at the meetings and are glad to answer all questions.

Parents are invited to come and receive their instructions and a review of the two preceding meetings. The next meeting will be held Wednesday evening, January 31 at 7:45 p. m.
