In other counties, some information on the character of the land compiled by local, state and federal agencies concerned with land use is available. Field inspection will supplement present classification work.

First sales of the more than two million acres reverting to the state last November will involve the 225,000 acres which former owners have asked to be auctioned, and will be held by counties sometime after June 1, when the huge clerical task of checking and posting titles is expected to be complete. Other acreage, now being classified, will not be for sale before next fall.

Full details on disposition of recently reverted state lands north of the Muskegon-Bay City line may be obtained at offices of northern county treasurers and at district offices of the conservation department.

PLAN USE FOR REVERTED LANDS IN NORTH

While details of lands recently reverted to the state in a dozen of the 47 northern counties are still to be transferred from the auditor general's office, the conservation department's lands disposition has begun planning the lands' disposition.

Study of soil types and consideration of social and economic factors will determine the basic classification into agricultural and non-agricultural lands. Agricultural lands will be sold at public auction, if there is a demand for them. Non-agricultural lands in most cases will be dedicated to forestry, game and other conservation uses.

Land economic survey data are being used for the counties in which the surveys are complete.

Complexion Secrets

WHEN winter winds blow, complexion troubles grow! So here's a home beauty treatment to encourage the return of a schoogrt complexion.

Without proper care, may be among the complexion troubles that have "gone with the wind." Perfect cleanliness is the basis of a perfect skin. In fact, pure soap is one of the best and cheapest remedies for preventing dried-up skin so often caused by cold weather and hot rooms.

Daily facial massages with soap and water help keep complexion soft, smooth and young—in the winter time, or at any time.

Face-washing itself is a fine art. Remember that skin needs stimulation as well as cleansing and softening—and that soap, which plays so large a part in this beauty routine, should be chosen with great care. Olive and palm oils, for instance, are both beautifying and soothing—and soap made with them is highly recommended for completion use.

Soapsud Massage

Hot water is slightly drying and should be avoided. Always use luke warm water for cleansing the face. Whisk up plenty of thick, rich lather with your complexion soap. Cover face and neck with suds, spreading them upward and outward. Then massage with the fingertips until every last speck of dirt and cosmetics has been removed.

In addition to the finger massage, many women find complexion brushes a wonderful help in stimulating circulation. Use the brush gently with an upward and outward stroke—giving extra attention to the chin and sides of the nose, where oil glands are most active.

Rinse carefully with warm water, and end the washing with quick sprays of very cold water. Pat the face dry with a soft towel.

'Mother Knows Best' Doesn't She?

Guiding their inquiring minds and dynamic activities... choosing their food, clothes, entertainment and health needs... the well-informed modern mother knows what is best for the welfare of her offspring. And it is safe to say that an incalculable share of her accurate information has had its beginning in the advertising columns of this newspaper.

Many of the advertisements today bristle with ideas. They are more than catalogs. In the true sense, they are education! Scientific minds contribute to their contents. Their recommendations are based on deep thought. Their words are carefully chosen; their diction studiously formed for clarity and understanding.

Through advertisements the mother of today learns authoritatively about new methods in the care of children's teeth. About antiseptics and hygienics. About body-building and health-giving foods. About new comforts as well as new styles, in juvenile wearing apparel. About books and schools and vacation camps... The advertisements pour innumerable hints and suggestions into her store of knowledge. They make her a more capable manager of the home and guardian of the family exchequer.

"Mother knows best"—is this expression heard about your home? Is it just an admonition? Or, is it founded on facts. Reading advertisements will to help make it so.
