

Highway Department Sends Out Truck Maps

Free distribution of the 1940 truck operators' maps has been started by the state highway department.

Maps will be furnished all truck operators licensed by the public service commission. They delineate all routes affected by loading restrictions during the spring break-up.

The maps this year also show load limits on certain bridges in the state. These bridge load restrictions are in effect the year around in contrast with the spring highway loading restrictions which are effective only as weather conditions require.

The department expects to distribute about 3,000 copies of the truckers' map.

Rev. Gordon Cameron, who conducts the Thursday night Bible and song service in Folker subdivision, was unable to be out last Thursday evening because of the death and funeral of a friend. Planning to come out on Friday night instead, he was astonished to receive a message notifying him his services would not be needed. Shortly afterward he was again surprised when twenty-five men, women, and children from the Folker subdivision, marched into his home and presented him with a huge birthday cake. The occasion being his fifty-fourth birthday. Immediately then the pianist of the group took her place at the piano and began an opening hymn. After the service the group moved to the dining room and partook of a hearty lunch brought by the visitors. The usual "free will" offering, contributed to a little more generously than is customary, with instructions that he purchase himself a birthday gift with it.

Olivet College Adopts "Tutorial" Plan

Collectors, in a term applied to one of the more interesting innovations at Olivet College since the introduction of the Tutorial plan of education. The freshmen students, one by one, are invited into the Faculty room where they sit and listen as one instructor after another evaluate their work, their attitude toward their studies and their abilities and progress. Finally the president sums up the combined opinions of the faculty into then the student is given an opportunity to make reply. This collective evaluation, by instructors and students gives said student a much better idea of his progress than any grade marks could do. Freshman collections start March 11th.
