

STATE LEADS IN COMMERCIAL LAKE FISHING

Michigan's leadership among the eight states engaged in commercial fishing on the Great Lakes is confirmed by latest statistical bulletins of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries. For 1938, Michigan's 28,829,400 pound catch worth $2,265,133 was well over a third of the total American Great Lakes catch of $1,242,500 pounds worth $6,082,212.

Lake Erie was most productive for American commercial fishermen, with 11,981,202, but the 24,379,400 pound catch in Lake Michigan was worth more at $2,293,985.

Ohio fishermen most closely approached the Michigan production, and Wisconsin ranked third, with 11,178,804. Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois and Indiana following in that order.

Michigan employs the most fishermen, 2,741 out of 6,976 engaged in American Great Lakes waters, ranks first in the number of steam large motor fishing vessels, first in small motor boats and first in other kinds of boats used in fishing.

Michigan fishermen have the most fear of different kinds, although in small mesh (2 to 3 1/2 inches) gillnets, and trot line hooks, of which Wisconsin fishermen use greater amounts.

GARDEN CLUB PRESENTS FLOWER SHOW ON TUESDAY

The Farmington Branch of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association will present their 8th Annual Flower Show on Tuesday, June 11, at the Baptist church.

Decorations will include arrangements of flowering shrubs, roses, peonies, iris, old-fashioned bouquets of mixed flowers, vases in bottles, miniatures and arrangements in which entrants use identical containers. There will also be informal supper tables and silver tables in the early American manner. Another section will be for specimen blooms where each flower is labeled and judged in competition with other specimens of the same variety. Arrangements are to be in place by eleven o'clock.

Most popular are the arrangements made by the junior group, including children from six to sixteen years of age. These arrangements are to be made at the show, and fall into two classes, arrangements for bedrooms and luncheon tables with a special class for miniature gardens. Children's arrangements are to be in place by two o'clock in the afternoon.

A one act play "Save The Wild Flowers," will be presented at the show at 3:30, by Girl Scout Troop No. 5, and will be followed by presentation of awards to school children who took part in the conservation project during the last school semester.

The Flower Show is open and free to the public. Mrs. Clarence Johnson, general chairman, Mrs. R. E. McCurdy is schedule chairman, assisted by Mrs. F. J. Nash, Mrs. Carl Ritter and Mrs. Lloyd Gullen. Contact chairman is Mrs. Leo Ganche, publicity chairman Mrs. Thomas Brennan and Mrs. Warren Joy is conservation chairman.

Young Republicans To Form Club Here

Plans are being made to form a Young Republican Club in Farmington and the vicinity. All young Republicans interested in joining are invited to attend a meeting to be held at the home of Miriam B. Callan, at 33309 Shawansee, on Friday evening, June 11, at eight o'clock for the purpose of organizing and electing officers.

Mrs. Margaret Norton, of Rochester, president of Woman's Republican Club in Oakland County, will be present, and will assist in the formation of the Club. Also under discussion will be tentative plans for a Southern Oakland County Rally, to be held in Farmington, during July.

Everyone interested in joining is urged to attend this first meeting. The Young Republican Club is open to both young men and women, between the ages of 21 and 35.

Concealed Evidence

By NAN CLIFFORD
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

MARY MARTIN stored against at George's Aunt Olivia. "Oh, bread!" she cried nervously. "I'm perfectly certain I never could do that. Besides," brightly, "we've just got awfully good bread at the delicatessen."

"Nonsense!" snorted Aunt Olivia. "I brought George up on homemade bread and I'm positive he won't thrive on any other kind. I noticed," eyeing Mary accusingly, "that he looked peaked when he stopped in to see me last night. And only three months married!"

"That's because he's been palling around with Professor Jenkins next door," retorted Mary with spirit. "George wouldn't look so starved and neglected if he didn't go loafing through swamps getting his feet soaked and his face all scratched up. He's getting absolutely balmy about botanical specimens."

"George needs to eat plenty of home-made bread," declared Aunt Olivia with irritating persistence, quite ignoring Mary's outburst. "Get paper and pencil, my dear. I'll give you my three hour recipe. It's as simple as A B C. One hour to set, one hour to rise, one hour to bake."

Mary sighed, but gave in to preserve harmony in the family, she even promised to bake bread that very day.

It was two o'clock when Mary, following Aunt Olivia's instructions, wrapped the bowl containing the bread sponge snugly in a blanket and placed it in the south window to set.

There was an sun. Clouds threatened rain and a depressing chill was in the air.

Mary watched the clock anxiously. At exactly three she prepared to go to the next problem—that of making the sponge into loaves. Strangely, she found the unpleasant-looking lump of dough at the window much as she had left it. And Aunt Olivia had said it would have risen to the top of the mixing bowl. Uncertainly, she decided to let it set awhile longer.

Four o'clock came and the dough was unchanged! Five o'clock—and George due shortly!

All in a dither, her cheeks blazing and her hands cold, Mary seized the yellow bowl and made for the back door. Aunt Olivia should never hear of it! Never! As for George—it was just as well he shouldn't hear of it either. At 5:15 she ran around the corner to the delicatessen.

"Gosh! This is good bread, honey," enthused George that night at dinner. "I stopped in to see Aunt Olivia for a minute and she told me of the treat I had coming." He helped himself to another slice.

"I'm glad you like it, darling," she said blithely. "You must eat loads of it. Aunt Olivia says you're beginning to look peaked."

George grinned sheepishly. "Poor old Aunt Olivia can't reconcile herself to my man's estate. I owe her a lot, honey, and I'm glad you let her boss you a little. And say! are you some cook or are you some cook? This bread is better than any Aunt Olivia ever baked a fast into."

Mary's consciousness gave her a stab. But, in spite of it, she could not help but relish the keen joke.

"Holy catnip! come here!" shouted George the next morning.

Mary rushed in from the kitchen to find him standing bung-eyed at the dining room window.

"Look; look there!" he cried, pointing a finger excitedly. "A magnificent specimen of fungi found in our own garden. I must call Professor at once. He'll be ga-ga over it. Just yesterday we were discussing the types of fungi found in this climate. I'm dead sure this is calvatia glauca—a type he's never before discovered around here. It must be fully eighteen inches in diameter, plant smooth, nearly sessile, cortex white and smooth, becoming yellowish. See—"

But Mary was not listening. Horrified, she stared out of the window. Yes, that was the very spot. Close to the spring bush. A white mass of something that could be only one thing had pushed aside the thin layer of soil with which she hastily covered the co-conuts of the yellow bowl. During the night, the temperature had turned considerably warmer.

Beaming with his glad tidings, George started for the garden gate to summon the professor. Mary clutched his arm.

"Wait—a minute—darling!" trying to overcome the paroxysm of laughter that convulsed her. "That's not—that's not a toadstool."

"Toadstool!" exploded George indignantly. "Of course, it's not a toadstool. It's a very rare specimen of—"

"Homemade bread!" gasped Mary.

George looked alarmed. "What's the matter, honey? he asked anxiously. "Don't you feel well? Are you feverish or something?"

Mary choked, but managed to explain.

"Anyhow," she sighed contentedly, after she'd been forgiven for a number of things—the most important being George's injured feelings. "I'll never have to try to make bread again, thank goodness!"

Mrs. Harold West Buried on Friday

Residents of Farmington and the surrounding area were saddened last week by the death of Mrs. Harold West. Funeral services were held Friday, from the residence at Halsted and Grand River avenue, with Spencer J. Heeney in charge of arrangements. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery, with Rev. Gilbert A. Miles of the Baptist church officiating.

Mrs. West was born 64 years ago in Brookline, Massachusetts. She had lived in the Farmington area for the past 35 years, and had been ill only two months. Surviving are her husband, and one sister of California.

New President

MRS. MARGARET MATTERS, Incoming President of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts.

An appeal for calm and more faith in the omnipotence of God in the face of the present world turmoil, featured the gathering in Boston, Massachusetts, June 2 of thousands of Christian Scientists for the first annual meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

"Trusting in the omnipotence of God," said Harry C. Browne, First Reader of The Mother Church, in reading a message from The Christian Science Board of Directors.

"enables one, through demonstration, to enjoy the freedom of thought resulting from the unfolding of the characteristics of divine Mind as expressed by Christ Jesus. "Becoming cognizant of the true idea about anything, exposes its oppositional opposite as a lie. Therefore, when the true idea of man's relationship to God is universally expressed, misunderstandings between men and nations will vanish."

"The divine Mind is in reality the only power; therefore nothing can resist the manifestation of righteousness. With due regard for the necessary human footsteps, which our Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, says are indispensable in Annual Meeting, it is also imperative to look to the wisdom to supply the impetus to all things in a right way and at the right time."

Church Officers

Mrs. Margaret Murney Glenn, C.S.B., of New York, daughter of the late Major General Edwin F. Glenn, of the United States Army, was elected President of The Mother Church to succeed George Shaw Cook, C.S.B., of Brookline, Mass.

Edward L. Ripley, of Brookline and Ezra W. Palmer of Marshfield, were re-elected Treasurer and Clerk respectively. The chief duty of the President is to serve as presiding officer at the Annual Meeting.
