

HINT AIDS DISHWASHING

Use of a dairy plate method can simplify one of the chores of dishwashing. It is pointed out by the department staff members at Michigan State College, Tumbler, that have contained milk should be rinsed out with cold water before they are put into hot dishwasher. If hot water is used first, the residual fat melts and emulsifies over the surface of the glass, requiring more strenuous scrubbing to clean the glass.

Intensified study of the relationship of wildlife management to farm crops and practices is being carried on at the Rose Lake Wildlife Experiment Station near Lansing, a state conservation department project financed mainly with funds supplied by a federal excise tax levied on sporting arms and ammunitions.

FIRE RUNS FASTER UP HILL.
A forest fire runs uphill with greater rapidity than downhill because the heated air draws the flames upward; the steeper the hill the greater the speed. After passing the crest, a fire travels along more slowly down the other side.

MERCHANTS LOSE DOUBLEHEADER TO OLD MAN WEATHER

Rain forced the Farmington Merchants baseball team to call off two games scheduled for the week end. They were to have played Alger Park a Detroit Federation team on Saturday, and the Turpin Athletic club, a colored squad, on Sunday.
The game with the Jackson Prison "Majors" which was to have been played at Jackson next Sunday, has been moved up to Sunday, July 14, said H. F. Brennan, Merchants' manager.
Two games have been scheduled for the coming week end, according to Brennan. On Saturday the Merchants will meet the Dodge Bros. Males at 2:30 on the Farmington field, and on the following day, also at 2:30 on the home grounds, they will play the Time Department squad of the Ford Motor Co.
Interest is growing in the district tournament of the National Semi-Pro Association, which will be held in Farmington, July 4, 5, and 6. The latest team to sign up for the tourney is Warren (Mich.) Cougars. This makes eleven teams which to date have indicated that they will come to Farmington to battle it out for the district championship. Other teams entered are Quality Baking Co. of Kalamazoo, Kelsey-Hayes Wheel, Wyandotte Melina-Moran, Dearborn Merchants, Trenton Merchants, Amazo, Wolverine Trade, Garden City Merchants, Detroit Colored Stars, and Farmington Merchants.

COUNTY CROP PAYMENTS MOVED AHEAD TWO WEEKS

Farmers of the Farmington area are advised by Walter Cook, chairman of the Oakland County AAA Committee, that applications must be made and premiums paid for Federal crop insurance on or before August 21, which is two weeks earlier than the deadline in Michigan was September 15.

Application must be made and the premium paid for insurance on the 1941 crop before the crop is seeded or by August 21, which is two weeks earlier, he said. Last year the deadline in Michigan was September 15.
Aside from this earlier closing date and a few minor administrative changes, the 1941 program is the same as the 1940 program. Applications will be taken at the Oakland County AAA office and the County AAA committee will handle local administration of the program.
According to word received from Leroy K. Smith, Manager of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a revision is being made in the yields farmers may insure in 1941. This revision is the result of bringing the effect of actual recorded yields into the yield and premium rate are determined for each individual farm on the basis of yield and loss experience over a period of years.
A brief summary of the main points of the 1941 insurance program, as given by Mr. Cook, follows:
1. Any farmer complying with the provisions of the crop insurance program may insure up to 75 per cent of the average yield of his acreage. The insurance is stated in terms of bushels.
2. Applications will be made for insurance on the full wheat acreage allotment unless it is certain less than the allotment will be needed, in which case the insurance will cover the actual acreage to be seeded. No insurance will be written on acreage planted in excess of the 1941 AAA acreage allotments.
3. The premium rate is computed separately for each farm and is based on the risk involved in growing wheat on that particular farm, averaged with the loss experience of the county in which the farm is located. Premiums are stated in terms of bushels.
4. A crop insurance contract may be used as collateral security for a current loan.
5. In case a grower's crop fails to produce the insured amount, through no fault or neglect on his part, he may claim an indemnity which in bushels is sufficient to bring his production up to the insured amount.
Mr. Cook said that 12 Oakland County farmers, under the 1939 crop insurance program, received indemnities totaling 645 bushels.
Copper has been mined in Michigan since 1845 and for more than forty years thereafter this state was the leading producer of copper in the nation.

Human Interest

By RAY FOLEY
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

AN INSPIRATION came to the city editor. He snapped his fingers triumphantly and swept his glance over the busy editorial rooms. His searching gaze lighted on Joe Ryan, dozing at a corner desk.

"Ryan!"
The fellow heaved Joe to his feet. "Coming, chief!"
"Listen, jug," the editor said when his reporter had perched himself upon a corner of his desk. "I'm sick and tired of dishing out the same old savant of politics, murder, breach-of-promise actions, and press-agent blarney. I want something real for a change, something close to the soil. A story that will touch the heart of every reader! A simple little tale of defeat or triumph that will get the same reaction from a banker or a bum. Do you follow me?"

Joe scratched his head.
"Sure. But where will I get it?"
The editor buried his face in his hands and groaned.

"Where will I get it?" he asked me! A million living, breathing people within a radius of a few miles and he asks me "Where will I get it?"
He drew a tremendous breath and beat his teeth but when he opened his eyes to deliver his withering blast Joe was wisely among the missing.

Five minutes later Joe Ryan sat within a roaring electrical train.

"The train's got a screw loose," he muttered. "Something close to the soil" he tells me—and there ain't enough soil in this city to grow a geranium.
He drew a skeptical eye on the stream of people drifting below. "As alike as a basket of string-beans. All doing their usual jobs in the usual way; living, marrying, having children, celebrating anniversaries—Whee-e-e-e!"

He broke off his sullen musings with a startled whistle. His wandering scrutiny had encountered a crowd of shuffling, shuffling, beaten men that straggled the length of a cheerless street.

"A bread-line!"
In the depressing parade of hungry outcasts must be vivid tales of men who had lost their jobs and the gods and lost. There was a lead for the opening sentence—"The dice of the gods are loaded." No, too hackneyed. "He was asking for bread, this man." No, too hackneyed. "With mind busily stringing words together that would grip the reader's attention, Joe hurried off the train."

It was a different Joe Ryan who faced his editor shortly afterward. "Just take a look at my peepers!" he commanded.
The editor eyed the too corn-cob and sneered. "To blazes with your peepers. Did you get the story?"
"I found a bread-line!"

"See you! I had visions of enough human interest stories to take a year. And what did I get? Take a look at these eyes!"
The editor repeated his opinion of Joe's swelling blue-black eyes and the reporter burst forth again: "I joined the line myself as though I were as broke as the rest of them."

"A perfect disguise."
"You're telling me. When I finally got my mug of coffee and eventually reached a speckled group of four fellows sitting together. In a tactical way I seated myself near them and although they weren't very hungry I managed to get something out of them."

"Well!"
"One of the fellows was a short, fat Frenchman who said he used to be a stock speculator. The millionaire went broke and as the demand for fancy French cooking had vanished he hit the toboggan slide. The second fellow was a lanky Englishman who 'informed' me that he was formerly the butler for the same millionaire. The third guy, a husky Irishman, told me he had been the millionaire's chauffeur."

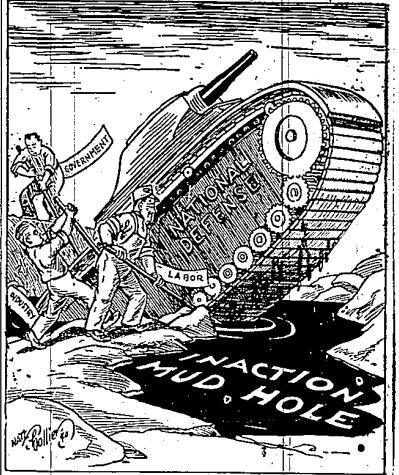

"They were kidding you!"
"Don't know it! When I got around the Irishman's general knowledge of what an elm and a yew looked like, I said: 'I suppose you're the millionaire these birds used to work for.' And with that the big fellow broke into a grin and bangs me twice, once in each eye."
"Serves you right. You ought to know that a man loses his sense of humor when he stops eating regularly."
"I know it now. But what about the little bunch of violets for your box on page one?"

"Well, let it go. I've got another idea. It's red hot. Listen—"

On a bench in the center of a small black park sat four men. The short, slim, weary-looking one was speaking to the tall Irishman. "You should not have lost your temper, Riley. If a policeman had appeared we might all have been arrested. It would have been most humiliating for me if I had been recognized by some reporter at the police station."

The Irishman gestured vaguely with his hand.
"I'm sorry, sir," he answered.

Happy Birthday to the "Kitchen Count"

KNOW why coffee perks? Soup's so good? Pots and pans have holes for hanging up? Modern stoves aren't "ornery"? We're blest with baking powder? Coffee's best? The only American nobleman, is behind them all, and every household certainly should be glad to celebrate his birthday on March 26th.
"Genius of the kitchen" is one description of the Yankee Count who was born plain Benjamin Thompson, back in 1758 in the Massachusetts colony, but he didn't stop there. He began the baking powder—which is just what the practical "kitchen scientist" would have wanted. To quote from Count Rumford's own writings—"Any discovery or improvement by which the procuring of good and wholesome food can be facilitated must contribute very powerfully to increase the comforts and promote the happiness of society. I deem that work and baking powder that's dependable are reasons enough to celebrate the birthday of America's only nobleman."
