PREPARED against emergencies... big or little

A squirrel is perhaps the last thing you'd think of as a menace to telephone service... but he can do a lot of damage by gnawing through the lead sheathing of a telephone cable. To guard against damage from punctures, many cables are kept filled with gas. The instant gas escapes, the lowering pressure automatically sounds an alarm in a central office. The location of the break is determined within a few feet, and often the damage is repaired without interruption of your service. Whether the emergency is large or small, this Company is prepared to protect telephone communication, a vital factor in national defense.
