Calling Mr. Chips

(Exchange)
At Brookfield, as you will remember, there was rather an argument that day when the new beadmaster called Mr. Chips into his office to discuss the question of Latin promuciation, Mr. Chips wasn't much for making boys say "Kikkero" when they would only revert to saying "Sissero" as soon ag they got out of school, And he jyasn't impressed by arguments that times were changing and that Brockfield impressed by arguments that times were changing and that Brokefield needed stream-lining to fit time. What would Mr. Chips say o the powers-that-be in Boston University, on learning they had dacked to omit Greek and Latin from the entrance requirements of students aiming at a Bachelor of Arig Degree? One desen't quite know. Mr.

Remember Mr. Chips reaching to his class at Brookfeld while the cruman bombs exploded disting the motor of the was reached disting the motor of the was reached disting the motor of the was reached disting the consult of this class at Brookfeld while the cassar said now strangely these so-called deal languages of the tolk of the consult of this matter of "letting up" on Language and Greek just when they might sound of the properties of the consult of this matter of "letting up" on Language and Greek just when they might sound of Good-bye Latin, good-bye Greek?

Not quite, of course. Any more than it could ever quite be Good-bye Mr. Chips.

Sense in Air Service

lot "Luck of Rearing Camp" to one of New Jersey's big fountain pen manufacturers. They're a raria' tearling reverse in fact they have just been tearling to the time of $2,000; they have; in fact they have just been tearling to the time of $2,000; they have; in fact they have just been tearling to the time of $2,000; they have; ton down walls, torn up floors, as the lusty forty-cliners did when they rode into town with their shootin' irons blazing.

But the outcome is not a posse hunt or a howling, yowing trial-without-jury. No. It is just a quiet $13,800 profit for the pen company. When a fountain pen manufacture is out to a factory in them thar sills. Part of his bustness is "minima" the metal, which lodges in the woodwork, in the soft under the factory, in the workmen's overalls and shoes, during the process of manufacturing gold pen nibs.

The company, that put New Jersey on the Santa Fe Trail was about to leave its old premises for new ones, Hence the "gold rush." Like any good tenant, the company cleaned up 'the old place" when leaving. This is a story housewives may file away until winter is over, then get it out, hlow the dust off, and read it for any inspiration it may contain along about spring-cleaning time.

The trouble with George O'Connor, the Jersey City exdireman who discarded the Q'Connor's last-year's kitchen calendar—he was too willing. The four-alarm shriek Mrs.
O'Connor let out when she found the old calendar missing must have been something to make even a retired fireman jump for the brass pole. But what must his reactions have been when he learned that on the back was pinned the vation if competitors were introduced for reasons of national prestige.

It is quite possible that during the two years which the pact has form enough business may develop between the United States and Canada on some routes to make parallel sarvices profitable. In the meantime, the fair "watt had see" attitude of both the little states and Canada will allow the air companies of each country to develop their own international routes and make a profit. It is this arrangement nether matter and seed the condition of the contribution that it is the condition of the contribution that it is the condition of the condit
