

STATE HEALTH DEPT. PROTECTS TOURISTS

Inspection of Michigan's 2,700 resorts is in full swing as county, district and state health departments join forces to protect the health of summer vacationists.

"Water and milk supplies, sewage, garbage and refuse disposal, food handling methods and bathing beaches are thoroughly inspected and where standards are met, large sanitation approved signs are posted," said Dr. H. Allen Meyer, State Health Commissioner. "This sign tells the tourist that the resort has health department approval. Look for the white metal signs with 'Sanitation Approved' Michigan Department of Health' in big black letters. It will be a good place to stop."

Records are divided into seven types by the Michigan Department of Health. These are: summer trailer camps, cabin camps, summer recreation camps, state, county and township parks, amusement resorts, resort hotels and community resorts.

GOVERNOR ISSUES SAFETY PROCLAMATION

Following is a proclamation issued by Governor Murray D. Van Wagener, proclaiming the period from Thursday, July 3 to Monday, July 7, as Michigan Safe Driving Days. This proclamation is issued in an endeavor to eliminate fatal traffic accidents over the holiday week end. The text of the proclamation follows:

Proclamation

Forty-nine persons died on Michigan highways over the Memorial Day week-end. That was 49 too many.

As Governor of the State of Michigan, I call upon all citizens, all state, county and municipal officials, to join in a great effort to prevent a repetition of this tragedy over the Fourth of July week-end.

Celebration of our Independence Day will bring a peak of traffic volume such as we have never seen before on a state-wide basis. We can prevent a repetition of 49 too many deaths.

We can do this if all Michigan citizens will cooperate by driving safely over the Fourth of July week-end and every weekend thereafter during the summer.

I am asking the state departments to take the lead in this safe driving campaign. All local governments, city and county, are sincerely requested to cooperate. Public and private organizations alike can do their part by bending every effort toward spreading the word for safe and sober driving over the Fourth.

Forty-nine fatalities due to motor car crashes over Memorial Day weekend were too many. We need not have a repetition. Sensible driving and walking on streets and highways will prevent it.

I hereby proclaim the period from Thursday, July 3 to Monday, July 7 as Michigan safe driving days to call attention to the need for extreme caution on the part of motorists and pedestrians.

Murray D. Van Wagener, Governor.

STATE POLICE TO CHECK DRIVING HABITS

A thorough check of the driving habits of motorists over the Fourth of July holiday season weekend will be made by the Michigan State Police as a result of a special cooperative effort planned by Secretary of State Henry P. Kelly and Commissioner Oscar G. Ohlander.

Commenting on the effort for a "safer Fourth" this year, Kelly states that, "in the judgment of the state police, a motorist is found to be driving at such a speed as to constitute a hazard to life, limb or property, or to obstruct or interfere with the normal flow of traffic, or to violate the rules at heavily traveled intersections, or overtake and passes other cars on the highway in a hazardous manner, such violations will constitute the basis for suspension of that driver's license."

All the high record of 49 fatalities as a result of auto accidents over the recent Memorial Day holiday season has prompted the Department of State and the State Police to this special vigilance during the coming Independence Day holiday weekend. Revocation of drivers' licenses are mandatory by the Secretary of State on the recommendation of the state police.

The period of revocation is based on the seriousness of the charges preferred against the motorist.

An analysis of the reports covering the accidents on Memorial Day shows that three violations led all others as accident causes. They are: failure to obey traffic signals at intersections, reckless overtaking and passing in heavy traffic and excessive speeding.

Michigan Fishing Law Guides Now Available

Indicating the trend of midwest vacation thinking are increased demands for 1941 Michigan fish law digests, the hand-sized conservation department guide to fishing regulations. On placing an order for an additional supply of the digests, Mildred Howe, manager of the Michigan Tourist Information Bureau on South Dearborn street, Chicago, reported that inquiries about Michigan tourist attractions are four times greater this year than last.

Assessed 50 cents for each undervalued trout and for each trout in his possession in excess of the legal limit, an Otsego county angler paid a fine of $33 in justice court.

Arrested by Conservation Officer Leo Marlett on the West Branch of the Susquehanna river, Fisherman had in his possession 47 trout—32 more than the law allows, 34 of them undervalued.

During the coming school year Princess Watassa, the Indian story teller from the Michigan Subject Association, will again visit schools over the state telling her Indian health legends. Bookings are being made now from the Michigan Tuberculosis Association office in Lansing, with no charge to the schools.

FUR TRAPPING: WORTH MILLION A YEAR IN MICHIGAN

It's not a lost art or historical industry when it's still worth a million dollars a year. That is the estimate of annual returns placed on fur animal trapping in Michigan.

D. W. Hayne of the Michigan State College zoology department estimates more persons do some trapping in these modern times than in the days of a hundred or more years ago when trapping was the main source of income.

In 1850, for instance, it is estimated Michigan had an Indian population of between 30,000 and 15,000. The census of 1830 lists 12,819 free white males over 10 years of age. So Hayne figures there likely was a maximum total of about 20,000 including 7,500 male Indians who might have been engaged in trapping.

Contrast that with the licensed trappers in 1937 and 1938 when about 22,000 Michigan persons paid small fees to the state for the privilege.

Historically, according to Hayne, the state owes much to its original fur-bearing population. White men have been active in Michigan for approximately 200 years. For the first two of these three centuries it was fur that made trade possible. After 1840, Michigan became more and more a lumbering and a farming state and trapping ceased to be the main industry.

Now the muskrat is the most important fur animal trapped for market. In recent surveys it is found that muskrats constitute 76 per cent of the catch and 60 per cent of the total value annually.

SEASON OPENS ON BLUEGILL, YELLOW PERCH AND BASS

Wednesday, June 25, was opening day of the 1941 fishing season for thousands of Michigan anglers who neither fish for trout nor have easy access to pike lakes or Great Lakes waters. Beginning Wednesday the season opened on every fish that swims in Michigan waters except grayling and sturgeon.

Certain to get much attention is the bluegill, the "kingfish" among the state's game fishes that accounts for twice as much of the average angler's catch, according to conservation department statistics, as any other single state fish.

It is the favorite of lake fishermen who use cast poles and worms, but it may be taken on artificial flies. Bluegills have been protected since March 31, to allow for spawning.

Blue-lighting black bass, largemouth and smallmouths, also became fair quarry Wednesday after being protected since December 31. The black bass limit is five fish, each not less than 10 inches long.

A million of good catches at the opening of the season is reported by conservation officers for most parts of the state. Favorable spring weather induced early spawning, assuring both a good crop of fry and a season opening in which the fish would be off the nest and looking for food.

The size limit on bluegills, sunfish, rock bass, crappies and yellow perch continues unchanged at six inches, and the creek limit allows each licensed angler of 10 fish, which the fish would be off the nest and looking for food.

ONE ANGLER IN 51 A WOMAN

On six quagmire southern Michigan "bluegill" lakes for which complete creel census records were kept the year around, the conservation department found that one out of every five summer anglers is a woman, but among ice fishermen, the ratio is only one in 25.

Lad, 10, Applies For Game Warden Job

A youngster's slant on the conservation law enforcement problem, revealed in a letter from Hicks Lake, near Evert, Osceola county, is one to cheer the conservation educational workers.

"Dear Sirs," the lad writes, "I would like to know if I could be a game warden here at Hicks Lake. Nobody would ever suspect me. I am only 10 and could not arrest anyone, but I could report all violations of conservation laws to my letter is not very long and probably not very important to you but it is to me. Please answer me yes or no."

Commenting his attitude on the problem of providing game and fish and forests for their fullest usefulness and expressing appreciation for his willingness to cooperate, conservation officials advised him they could give him no commission or regular employment. But in another 10 or 15 years, they say, he will be good recruit timber.

STATE'S DEFENSE WORKS TO BE SHOWN AT FAIR

Michigan's part in the re-arming of America—a role regarded by many as more vital than that played by any other single state—will be vividly exhibited as part of the ninety-second Michigan State Fair, Bernard J. Youngblood, General Manager of the Fair, announced this week.

The exposition will take place at the State Fair Grounds in Detroit from August 27 to September 7, inclusive.

Youngblood, who has just returned from Washington, where he conferred with Congressional and military officials relative to the military feature of the Fair, said he expects the feature to be the most impressive national defense exhibit ever placed on display in this country.

"As one of the outstanding features of our State Fair," Youngblood said, "the national defense exhibit, primarily, will symbolize the absolute inter-dependence of the soldier and the farmer, the tractor and the tank, the plow and the rifle. It will accentuate the extreme importance of and the production of food to the efficient operation of our armed forces."

"Secondarily, the military exhibit will give many thousands of persons their first chance to see and inspect at close range the strange new implements of warfare—many of which are Michigan manufactures—that the United States poses to defend itself."

Located on the huge Mall directly across from the orchestra shell and along both sides of the beautiful Civic Center near the main entrance to the Fair Grounds the military exhibit will include airplanes, tanks, blitz buggies, trucks and other Army transportation units, field artillery and anti-aircraft guns, hospital units and field kitchens. A detachment of soldiers, probably from Michigan's own Fort Custer at Battle Creek, will be detailed to and bivouaced on the grounds throughout the Fair.

Attuned to this national defense motif, Youngblood said, Michigan farmers and farm implement manufacturers are preparing one of the most interesting and outstanding agricultural exhibits seen at the Fair in many years. A total of $70,000 in premiums—more than has ever been offered before—will be awarded in the agricultural and woman's divisions.

The first tuberculosis association was organized in Michigan 32 years ago. Due to its efforts the tuberculosis death rate in the state has decreased from 29 to 32 per hundred thousand.
