

Police Car Purchased By City

In an effort to bring adequate police protection to Farmington the city commission has just purchased and put in operation a new police car. This follows the appointment of Charles Kowalski as chief of police for the city of Farmington.

The new scout car will be used in patrolling the city's streets to see that all traffic rules are observed. It will also aid the police in furnishing protection to the citizens on the edges of the city that have been unprotected, thus far. The new car will enable the police to cover all fires and accidents in the city and greatly eliminate congestion. A night patrol will be maintained with the car throughout the city.

Kowalski, who lives at 2265 Brookdale avenue, was named temporary chief of police by the city commission in May. He was appointed to conduct driving examinations, but due to certain regulations in the law as conducted by the Michigan State Police, the city was unable to carry on this service.

After several conferences with the state police authorities in Lansing, however, Kowalski has been authorized as examiner for this district. Licenses will be confined to the city of Farmington, however, for the present time, according to Kowalski. Only residents of the city may apply for driving examinations at the city hall. Tests will be given daily, Kowalski said, and hours will be published at a later date. It is expected that by September all residents within five miles from Farmington will be eligible for this service.

"We are working to build the best police department Farmington ever had, but we must have the full co-operation of all the citizens of this community," were the words of Chief Kowalski as he summarized the objectives of the department. It will furnish better protection for the homes, continued patrol of the business section, closer watch on the streets and highways of the city, greater help in times of fire or accident and the added convenience of giving driver tests in Farmington.

Kowalski was with the uniform division of the Detroit Police for 27 years. A veteran of the Spanish American War, he served in the United States Armed Forces for eight years, and is a member of the Spanish War veterans organization. He is also a member of the Masonic lodge.

Camp Sherwood Is Girls' Choice For Summer Fun

Living on the banks of Davis Lake in the midst of pine and birch trees is the vacation several Farmington girls are enjoying. They're spending several weeks at Camp Sherwood four miles from Farmington, sponsored by the Girl Scouts.

Carol Joy, and Betty, Marjorie and June Hunt are local girls there now. Marjorie Schroeder, Corinne Farmer, and Marian Gustafson have been there and are now back home. Barbara Lecker is among those who still expect to spend some time at Camp Sherwood before the summer has gone.

Camp Sherwood is open to all girls seven years old and over, not to just those who are Girl Scouts. There girls get an opportunity to experience camping, fellowship and sports.

Ninety-five acres of wooded hills comprise the camp location. Divided into four units, each camp unit is composed of tents, floored house, shower, double roof, containing cot beds and mattresses. Each is a small camp in itself with its own counselor carrying out its own program. All are co-ed.

FARMINGTON ACTIVE IN RED CROSS WORK

A variety of interest is shown in Red Cross work, according to the Oakdale County Chapter, which has been inquiring into activity in various localities.

Directors in Farmington Township are Howard Warner, Mrs. Joseph DeVriendt and Mrs. W. V. Sloum, who serve the Red Cross in numerous ways. Mr. Warner is principally interested in Roll Call, while Mrs. Sloum concerns herself with knitting for the township and assists with Roll Call, as does Mrs. DeVriendt. Mrs. DeVriendt is also interested in the items of the township, securing garments and reporting cases which come under the head of Red Cross jurisdiction.

Dr. P. W. Potts tells of the Girl Scout leaders first aid class which he is at the present time completing. Mrs. H. R. Lecker is also interested in this activity, having organized the class.

At Clarencville two groups of women were particularly interested in Home Nursing last year, as two classes were held for them. It is expected that this class will be repeated in Farmington this fall.

In other parts of the County training volunteers to meet defense needs has taken up a good deal of Red Cross workers time. In Farmington they are giving a course in motor mechanics, in addition to the garment work and training of staff assistants and volunteers for home defense measures.

In the chapter warehouses huge lots of material are cut and distributed to various places where they are completely and finally inspected and shipped to Europe. Twenty-five Pioneer Girls cutters cut hundreds of garments each evening.

Home nursing classes in Farmington women are given instruction in caring for their own health needs and those of their families have been organized all over the County. Thus in any emergency in which nurses are at a premium, nursing procedures can be followed.

Anyone in this community desiring to enter into Red Cross work is asked to call one of the local directors.

Urged To Save All Aluminum

Farmington people are being asked to contribute worn-out aluminum for national defense purposes on July 24 and 25, according to word received here this week from the Michigan Council of Defense in Lansing. The collection will be made simultaneously in every community of the nation to help overcome the temporary shortage of aluminum which is interfering with American defense production.

Members of the Groves-Walker Post of the American Legion will collect old aluminum from households in the Farmington area, according to Gordon Niles, commander of the local post.

First bulletins issued by the American Legion department of Michigan have just been received. Niles said and added that a definite program for the collections would be formulated Thursday night at a meeting of veterans.

A warning to housewives also was issued by Niles who stated that junk dealers and racketeers have begun to collect aluminum under the pretense of gathering it for defense purposes. Members of the local post are anxious that Farmington women do not give their old aluminum to any collectors until the American Legion's program for collection has been announced.

Under the present plan the aluminum will be sold to smelters, the money received to go for national defense purposes. A definite program for local collections will be announced next week, Niles said.

The leader of the drive is Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, who is also the United States Director of Civilian Defense. The full co-operation of Michigan has been pledged by Gov. Murray D. Van Wagner, who has asked the veterans' organizations of the state to do the job under the supervision of the Council of Defense.

"When the final results are announced, I want to see Michigan's name at the top of the list," Gov. Van Wagner told the veterans.

Every sort of war veterans in Michigan is co-operating. Mayors and village presidents are giving their help. County agents will be responsible for the collection in rural areas, and Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, 4-H Clubs, Parent-Teacher Associations, and other civic, patriotic, labor and fraternal organizations are expected to lend their active support.

Firemen Answer Four Alarms

The Farmington Fire Department has been unusually busy this week. Since the grass fire season this spring, there have been few calls, but this week there were four calls, three of them being with the City and three of them occurred just at noon.

On Saturday, at noon, the department was called to extinguish a grass fire at the corner of Grand River and Power avenue. The fire was a small one, there being no damage, and it was quickly put out.

Steve Explodes

On Tuesday a call came from the home of Mrs. William Chasler at 2216 Maple avenue. An oil stove in the basement had exploded and though the flames did not spread, there was a good deal of smoke.

It was alarming due to the fact that Mrs. Chamberlain's mother, Mrs. Kerr, has been confined to her bed for some time, and would have had to have been carried from the house if the fire became dangerous.

Truck Burns

On Wednesday, also at noon, a call came from the Wall Chemical Company on Grand River avenue, west of Farmington. A truck had caught fire directly across the road from the Company, and before the fire department could reach the fire, the truck had burned to such an extent that it could not be driven. It was not determined to whom the truck belonged.

House Impaired

Wednesday evening about eleven o'clock the fire department was summoned to the home of Joseph Korte on Shawwassee avenue. A chicken coop which was next to the garage directly in back of the house was on fire. The coop burned before firemen could put out the blaze. The 35 small chickens in the coop could not be saved.

Though the fire was so close to the garage and house, firemen were able to keep the flames from spreading, but the house was scorched.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Farmington Methodist church for Mrs. Harriet Gravlin, 73, resident of Farmington for the past 15 years. The Rev. D. C. Stubbs officiated.

Mrs. Gravlin died suddenly Thursday evening while on a shopping trip to Redford. She had been in poor health for the past five or six years. Although her health had been weak since an attack of pneumonia in the middle of the winter, she was feeling better at the time of her death.

She is survived by four other daughters in addition to Mrs. Eshelrod and one son, John G. Lots one to 10 inclusive of the Brookdale subdivision between Powers Ave. and Brookdale Dr. will cease to be in Commercial B district and become Commercial A district if city commissioners approve such action on the third reading of an amendment offered Wednesday night at the city commissioners' meeting.

The amendment, placed on its first and second reading, was offered by Max Hulett so that approval might be given for a building to be constructed by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company at the corner of Power and Grand River avenues.

Changing of Ordinance No. C-18, known as the zoning ordinance, was strenuously opposed by Commissioner K. E. Griffith on the basis that it would discriminate against property owners in the city by lowering land values. In the vote on the motion, made by Hulett, supported by Howard Otis, to place the amendment on its first and second reading Griffith's vote was the only no.

At his request it was entered in the minutes that he disapproved of the amendment because "people buying for business purposes should buy within areas zoned for business purposes."

In answer to a letter from the library association a motion was made by Delos Hamlin and supported by Adolph Nacker that $14 owed to the Farmington City and Township Library from last year be paid and carried to the 1940-41 budget. The motion was unanimously carried.

A motion offered by Griffith and supported by Hulett, was passed to have Mayor Leo Gildemister contact Jay Gibbs, chairman of a movement to improve sewage disposal conditions in southern Michigan, with regard to detailed information on sewage collection and treatment in this vicinity in connection with a letter received from the State Board of Health.

Confirmation was made of the appointment by the mayor of Donald Sackdier as acting building inspector during the illness of Carl Hogle. The motion was made by Hamlin and supported by Bagnall.

It was moved by Hulett and seconded by Hamlin that the ordinance committee be authorized to draft a suitable traffic code for the city to regulate speed, parking, and other traffic problems. The motion was passed.
