4-H ELECTRICIAN

ENTERPRISE shown by Robert O. Elson, 18, of Maple Rapids, Clinton county, in using electricity in his home and on the farm won him a place in Michigan's delegation to the recent 26th National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago. Competing in the sixth national 4-H rural electrification contest conducted by the Extension Service, the boy helped wire part of the house, and is transforming a basement workshop into an electrical shop. He started a club of boys interested in electrical work, and they meet in his shop weekly. Robert also made three electric fence controllers from scrap materials, the principle of which he demonstrated at the State College and State Fair. He was given the Chicago trip by the Westinghouse company, which also provides six $200 scholarships as prizes for national winners.

Chickadees Need Your Help on Winter Mornings

Everyone, at this time of year, is familiar with the little, slate-colored, black-capped chickadee, a constant visitor to those who are wise enough to feed him. He repays this kindness by destroying an enormous number of the insect pests that lodge in the tree trunks, waiting for warm weather to come out and feed on garden and trees. There is no bird that compares with the chickadee in this work, so it will reward you to attract them to your house by hanging out a piece of suet, or sprinkling some scratch feed where they can get it.

They are very friendly little birds, and their song, the familiar "chick-a-dee-dee," is a cheerful one, particularly when heard in the midst of the snow storms that seem actually to enjoy. In the spring this song changes to a silvery note very like the Roboe's. Though we seldom see him except in winter, the chickadee is an all year round resident. With the end of winter he leaves the open places and goes back into the woods and swampy places, to nest and raise his family. He builds his nest in hollow stumps or fence posts, often using the former home of a woodpecker or nuthatch.

Foods Reflect "Good Neighbors"

Inter-country diplomacy which has made "good neighbors" of South and Central America countries reflects itself on the average Michigan dinner table.

Even when home economists at Michigan State College recommend wider use of home grown produce including a wide variety of Michigan fruits and vegetables, the authorities still give credit for added variety and some of the spice or savoring to more southern sources.

In a recent compilation by the federal bureau of home economics, some of these food sources are indicated. That morning cup of coffee, even when blended with varieties of several different countries, still means South America.

One of the world's largest vanilla producing areas lies in neighboring Mexico. Sugar, as a runner-up to coffee in imports, comes from insular areas and Latin America to supplement the one-third supply grown in the United States.

The holiday chocolates recently munched add credit to tropical Brazil, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador and Venezuela. Favorite tropical fruit available 12 months a year is the banana grown in Mexico, Central America or Cuba.

Other food products grown by our southern neighbors include the coconut, pineapples and varying quantities of papaya, cashew nuts, molasses, dry vegetables and fresh fruits, allspice, sesame seed, anise, aloes and tonka beans. The latter are a source of extract which serves as a basis for imitation vanilla and other flavorings.
