Cables for America's Battle

In the past year, while the nation was preparing for the present struggle, Michigan Bell spent $28,000,000 largely to meet the need for increased telephone service.

Part of that total went into new buildings, additions and new central office equipment. But a large and important share was buried in the ground—in the form of telephone cable. 448,000 miles of new telephone wire were used in the cables placed by Michigan Bell in 1941—enough wire to go more than 18 times around the earth!

Hundreds of miles of new cable bring telephone service to military bases and munitions plants. Other hundreds supply the swiftly growing districts of defense workers' homes. As long as the necessary materials can be obtained, your Telephone Company will do its level best to provide good telephone service for all who need it.
