Notes

Don't forget the next meeting on Thursday, April 2, at 8:00 p. m. Let's all turn out to the card party at the Ladies of the Auxiliary are having at the Legion Home on Saturday, March 25. I'll be there if you will.

Sorry to learn that Comrade Riding is again in the hospital. Hope it is not serious.

If it is hoped that a great many of the Legionnaires and their families will turn out to the Boy Scouts for luck dinner at the high school on Friday night, March 27. A table has been reserved for the Legion. Bring your own eats.

The Scouts are doing a fine job in the community, and should be encouraged in their endeavor. It should be the duty of every Legionnaire to aid these boys.

necessary arose to win this war. "It is our privilege to live in this grand and great country where democracy survives. It is our duty to defend it from every enemy from within as well as from without, and the enemies within is where you can do your part."

Mr. Salowich ended his talk by saying, "It is a great thrill to look out of my office window and see the line after line of boys and men volunteering their services to their country, not for the excitement of the thing, but for the love of country and home. What man or organization DARES to stop production, and lose this war? It is no time to argue now, and there is no time for any of this. You Legionnaires can again do your part. Stop this propaganda, and do a job of keeping the wheels of production going. "Keep our sense of humor—be able to laugh and enjoy the things that God gave us. God is still in His Heaven. We'll all dare to do our part and duty, and back up our government."

Getting Husband in Two' Easy Lessons Told Here

Miss A. P. Jane reconciles herself to going through life without a mate because she believes she lacks the face, or the figure, or both, which would move some male to propose marriage.

But if Dr. Robert M. McMurray of Chicago knows his psychology, there is no reason why any woman—homely or not—cannot find a husband.

The trick, says Dr. McMurray, is to "achieve moral eminence" over some man.

The Chicago psychologist offers the following specific directions to avoid spinsterhood:

1. Having picked your man, begin to point out some of his more obvious weaknesses—always on the pretense of being helpful.
2. Give him the impression that you are the only one who understands him, gradually leading him to become more and more dependent upon you.
3. Be an offensive. Never let the boy fright get the upper hand.

The first step in this direction is to create situations in which men will be led to make adjustments or indulge in acts—preferably a kiss—which can be looked upon as compromising. The significance of such a trivium can be magnified.

"The next step," says Dr. McMurray, "is to apply moral pressure, always with dignity and restraint. Make no secret; the prevailing note of a campaign should be one of quiet bravery."

Perfume Smells Subject To Reactions of Woman

Perfumers who know their chemistry say that each perfume smells differently, according to the chemical makeup of the fair lady who puts it on. What might entrance on Georgia Glamour, might horrify on Mrs. Jones who teaches dietetics at New Green Center, Redhead, again, are said to give out a human variety of the mask's scent that conquered the conqueror when he put on his nature's impress, Josephine.

Some men, it is said, grow delirious on smelling this natural musk odor, whereupon the scheming siren works her wiles upon the helpless.

Recognizing this danger, English law-makers once tried to put through parliament a law stating: "That all women of whatever rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, who shall from and after such act seduce or betray into matrimony any of His Majesty's subjects by accented hair, costumed, artificial teeth, bolstered hips (they liked 'em plump in good old 1770) shall incur the penalty of the law now in force against witchcraft."

So did our English fathers in 1770 try to rob poor, weak women of their rightful weapons.

Cardinal Responsible

Cardinal Richelieu is responsible for carving knives having sharp points and table knives having round edges. He ordered his Sicilian knives rounded so guests could use them as toothpicks.

Arkansas

At one time there was confusion as to which was the proper pronunciation of the word Arkansas, and to settle this dispute the general assembly of 1881 appointed a committee to ascertain the correct manner. This they determined to be Ark-saw.
