Inside Latin America, by John Gunther. A famous commentator's impressions after a tour of the twenty eight countries of Central and South America, written in John Gunther's clear, interesting style, and intended to give the average American a clearer picture of his neighbors to the south. The author devotes most space to the ABC countries—Argentina, Brazil, and Chile, explaining the importance of their friendship to a United States at war. He describes Argentina as "the key to everything," the richest, most progressive, and most European State in Latin America; Brazil is overwhelmingly pro-American, but with strong pro-German influences, centered in the German embassy, and fed by Axis airplanes; the serious infiltration of Germans into Chile is pointed out, where a large colony lies within easy reach of the Straits of Magellan, and the army has been German trained for over twenty years. One chapter of the book contains the author's suggestions for the betterment of the U.S.-Latin American relations, and is well worth reading.

Quietly My Captain Waits, by Evelyn Eaton. A dashing adventure-romance of French colonial days in Nova Scotia, when Canada, then New France, was ruled by the Comte de Frontenac. The love affair of the fascinating heroine, Louise de Freneuse, and Pierre de Bonaventure is acted out against a background of warfare between the French and the English, and the siege of the old city of Port Royal. Indians, beautiful noblemen, trappers, courtiers, and priests dot the pages of this colorful novel.

Spiritus Rising, by Cecil Lewis. The spectacular career of an English aviator in the last war told by himself with modesty and humor. Entering the Royal Flying Corps (forerunner of the R.A.F.) in 1915, Cecil Lewis had risen to the rank of senior flight commander when the Armistice was signed, though his twenty-first birthday was still some months away. The intervening years were spent on the Western front, photographing enemy lines, downing an occasional German plane, maintaining contact between headquarters and the front, mingling with details of his flying career and interesting stories of Lewis' squadron companions and their exploits. The second part of the book describes the author's stay in China, where he spent two years teaching Chinese cadets to fly.

I've Been to London, by Temple Bailey. A novel of two sisters—Peggy and Pamela Pierce, totally different in character, yet bound by strong family affection. Beautiful, luxury-loving Pamela found her destiny on a visit to London, where she met and married the handsome millionaire playboy Gerry Mitchell. Soon discovering the weakness beneath her husband's glamor, Pam devotes her strong will to saving their marriage from disaster. At home, Peggy remains poor in material things, but gains in spiritual wealth in her love for Fergus McHugh. The background of the book is well-drawn, shifting from the luxurious settings of the Rivers and London to the shabby charm of the Pierce's home in Washington.

A WORD
TO THE WIVES

Rich in nutritive value, beef is ideal for the family menu, and with careful selection and cooking can be just as good for the family budget. Here are two recipes, one for blade steak, the other for flank steak, which may help you in your meal planning.

Flank Steak Fillets

(serves 6)

- 1 flank steak, about 2 lbs.
- ½ lb. suet or salt pork
- 1 cup canned tomatoes or condensed tomato soup
- 1 green pepper
- ½ onion
- 2 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper

Have steak scored lightly. Cut suet or pork into strips 1 inch wide and 1 inch thick. Place strips down center of steak lengthwise. Roll steak around fat and skewer tightly with seven or eight skewers placed at 2 inch intervals along the roll. Cut between skewers. Dip fillets in flour and brown slowly on both sides in about 1 tsp. lard. Turn the fire very low, add onion and pepper cut in thin slices, tomatoes or soup, and seasonings. Cover tightly and let simmer 1½ hours. Remove meat to hot platter, thicken gravy with 2 tsp flour mixed with ½ cup cold water, and serve.

Deviled Blade Steak
Rub blade steak well with dry mustard and marinate for 1 hour in sauce made of the following ingredients well blended—4 tsp lemon juice, 1 tsp Worcestershire sauce, 1 tsp grated onion, 3 tsp melted butter or bacon drippings, 1 tsp chili sauce. Broil steak 1 inch thick on both sides and add a few tbsp of the sauce, and cover. Cook slowly for about 45 minutes, or until tender.

Bread for Toast
What kind of bread makes the best toast? By this question is meant what age bread makes the best toast? It used to be held by home experts that fresh (moist) bread did not make good toast. But, although factory-baked bread retains nearly all original moisture, it has been "out of the oven" long enough to toast perfectly by the time it reaches the housewife.

Thus research on sliced, but moisture-proof bread, shows that from the time of wrapping until the bread is 72 hours old, only a 2 per cent loss of moisture occurs. However, the home-maker should recall this point, that slices must have uniform moisture distribution in order to produce uniform toast. This means—keep the bread wrapped tightly until you wish to use it, so all slices will be equally moist all over.

Lovellist Garden
Galsworthy said that the loveliest garden in the world is the Magnolia Garden on the Ashley River, 12 miles from Charleston, S. C. They were laid out early in the Nineteenth century by the Rev. John Gripe-Drayton, who brought the first azalea indica plants from the orient. Now there are millions of azalea blossoms, camellias, wisterias, roses, magnolia grandiflora, live oaks with Spanish moss and pools, artistically arranged to bring out the beauties of the gardening. Galsworthy said: "Nothing so free and gracious, so lovely and so beautiful, so richly colored yet so ghostlike exists, planted by the sons of men. Beyond anything I have ever seen, it is other-worldly. To this day I have seen no garden so beautiful as Magnolia Gardens."
