How to make your ELECTRIC SERVANTS

work for you more economically

Measured in terms of convenience and comfort, in hours of time and labor saved, your household electric service is one of the cheapest things you buy. Many of your electric servants can be operated even more economically by following a few simple rules:

YOUR ELECTRIC RANGE. Operate electricity by finishing surface cooking on "low" or sterno heat. When economical even meals (cook the entire meal at once). Use very little water in cooking (foods come up to "steaming" point more rapidly). Use the thermostat on your range for low-cost casserole dishes. Avoid wasting heat by choosing flat-bottomed utensils just big enough to cover the heating unit. Always keep lid on utensils.

YOUR REFRIGERATOR. A blanket of ice around the coils of your refrigerator actually makes your refrigerator work overtime—increases operating cost. Defrost it regularly for economy's sake. For the same reason, don't put hot foods in the refrigerator to cool. And don't open the door often or longer than necessary, because this lets the heat in. Locate your refrigerator away from heat sources—and out from the wall on inch by two to allow air circulation. Avoid overcrowding the refrigerator for efficient operation. And cover all foods so that moisture won't collect on the freezing unit.

YOUR SMALL APPLIANCES. Don't leave appliances turned on when temporarily not in use (your electric iron or toaster, for example). Pull the plug, and connect the appliance again later when you are ready to use it.
