RUTH THUENER IS THE BRIDE OF THOMAS BAKER

Miss Ruth Viola Thuener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thuener, became the bride of Thomas Leonard Baker, at a ceremony performed at Christ the King Church in Redford, Wednesday morning, October 14, at 9:30 o'clock.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of broad satin was fashioned on simple lines, and she wore a finger tip veil, held in place by orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

Miss Dorothy Thuener, the only sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was dressed in a rose colored satin, with fitted bodice and full skirt of floor length. Her head dress was of rose colored tulle, held in place with a satin band, and she carried rose colored chrysanthemums.

Carl Ohler was Mr. Baker's best man and Lester Thuener, brother of the bride, acted as the groom.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Thuener wore navy blue, with white, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Baker, wore a gown of black with green accessories.

Following the ceremony the reception was held in Maccabee Hall for two hundred guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker are on a honeymoon trip to Chicago, and will be at home to their friends in Detroit, upon their return.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thuener and family made their home on Parker Avenue for several years, and Ruth attended Parkington Public Schools before moving to Detroit.

"TRAILER VAGABOND"

By WARREN BAYLEY

BEILTON, MO.—CARRY NATION Before beginning this column, let me state that it is not intended as a blow against the cause of prohibition. If the facts it contains tend to prove that the enforcement of prohibition is a wishful dream—please remember that they are actual statements and accounts taken from the life of the greatest two-fisted hatcher woman that ever demolished a bar or smashed a bottle. Thirty years ago her name was a household word. Now that the war is with us again, and the tom-toms are beating for the return of the 18th Amendment, it might be well to pause and review some of the life of prohibition's greatest champion—to rerun again a few reels of the greatest light of the 19th and 20th Century—Carry Nation vs. John Barleycorn.

CARRY A. NATION, 1846-1911. FAITHFUL TO THE CAUSE OF PROHIBITION — "THE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COULD."

When those words were chiseled into her tombstone, it was public acknowledgment that she had lost the fight. But had she? Eight years after her death the 18th Amendment became law, due to a large extent to her one woman fight against liquor. One woman, and a housewife at that, had changed the life of 100 million people.

Born in Indiana—reared in Missouri—developed in Kansas. That was one writer's way of describing her life. Her first husband died in 1870 of delirium tremens. After his death she rolled up her sleeves and raised her right arm to the heavens. "This," she said, "is the right arm of God." From that day on, it was war against liquor to the finish.

In those days there had saloons, big bar-like places with sawdust on the floor and big brass cuspidors scattered along the wall. Taverns, with their leather seats and women customers were a thing unheard of. No—in those days they had saloons. A woman that drank was socially ostracized. "Dens of iniquity," said Carry Nation.

In those days the entire country was wet. Kansas was the first to try the great experiment. According to law it became illegal to sell intoxicating beverages. But human nature being what it is, and law officials being what they were—the saloons kept right on. By a kind of unwritten law they paid a fine of $25 per month which was the customary license fee for doing business. As one U. S. Senator put it, "The women have their law and the boys have their whiskey, so everybody is happy." Evidently he had not argued on Carry Nation's.

Taking her cue from the two-gun men of the west, Carry armed herself with two hatchets and became the only two-hatchet woman of history. Her first job was to clean up her home town of Medicine Lodge. She proceeded in a businesslike manner. She walked in with her two hatchets, smashed the back-bar glass, broke the whisky bottles, chopped up the bar and flattered out the cuspidors. Bartenders and customers fled before her wrath. She closed up every place in town.

Her next stop was Enterprise where she repeated her performance. Town after town felt the fury of her hatchets. Bar owners tried to have her arrested, but as they were operating against the law, the law couldn't protect them. When they heard she was coming, they just closed up and hoped for the best. She focused the eyes of the nation on the evils of drinking. Other women took up the fight. One was killed and the next day a church was burned. The days of Dodge City settled again over Kansas.

This year the emphasis will be placed upon wartime activities, to show how quickly and easily Girl Scouting can be adapted to meet emergency needs.

In addition to arranging to take part in special demonstrations of skills useful in war time, the Girl Scouts of Farmington will highlight their own part in the nationwide Girl Scout Victory Fund Campaign, wherein they will pledge themselves to buy at least one additional War Savings Stamp, to be given to the Fund, where it will be pooled with the stamps donated by other Girl Scouts throughout the country and converted into War Bonds. Girl Scout Week Begins Sunday

Enlistments in the U. S. Navy last week, through the Navy Recruiting Station in the Royal Oak Post Office reflect the attitude of southern Oakland County youths toward the new teen age job. During the past seven days, 13 men volunteered for naval service and not a single one was over 21, according to Yeoman Leonard L. Lewis, recruiter in charge.

Scores of others obtained consent papers to take home for their parent's signature. Many of these will have taken their oath of allegiance even before the draft bill becomes law.

Enlisting from Farmington was Henry J. Samborski.
