What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Navy is making a plea to civilians to turn in their binoculars for military use during the War. The Army and Navy both need binoculars for navigation and scouting purposes. Depending on the power of the lenses, they cost from $50 to $20 each.

If you have a set of 6 x 20 up to 7 x 50-power lens binoculars loan them to the Army or Navy. If not, your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps will help you buy this equipment for our fighting forces. At least ten percent of your income in War Bonds every payday will do the job . . . and provide the "eyes" through which a scouting pilot may spot an enemy battleship.

ENLISTMENTS IN THE NAVY SHOW INCREASE

Passage of the law to draft 18 and 19-year-olds has had a direct effect on the activity of the Navy Recruiting Station in the Royal Oak Post Office. Yeoman Leonard L. Lewis reports that applications have more than doubled among the age groups concerned. "Right now is the opportune time for these young men to learn what the Navy offers, both in valuable training and a chance to serve their country," Yeoman Lewis said.

"Navy training is practical. Navy-trained men are qualified for high-paying jobs in private industry after the war. This training is in 49 different trades and specialties, most of which are immediately useful in civilian occupations. These trades and specialties include all phases of radio aviation, each a field in which Navy-trained men may be at a premium when hostilities cease.

"Opportunities for rapid advancement in rate and pay are great. New ships are being launched and commissioned at a fast pace than at any time in Navy history. Scores of thousands of specialists are needed to man these ships."

During the past week several Farmington young men have enlisted in the Navy, most of them through the full time recruiting station in the Royal Oak Post Office, included in the recent enlistment are Edward V. Cloutier, Walter J. Ellis, Francis J. Engwiler, Douglas B. Haberman, William A. Peilo, Robert N. Birch and Edward G. Spratt.

TUBERCULOSIS CHRISTMAS SEALS GO ON SALE

Carrying the vital war-time message, "Protect Your Home from Tuberculosis," the 36th annual Christmas seal goes on sale Monday, November 23. Its colors form a patriotic motif—red, white, blue and bright blue sky.

But although its design is gay, its purpose is as grim as war itself. War conditions aid the spread of tuberculosis germs. England has seen the children stricken with tuberculosis meningitis. Where two children died before the war, now three die. The Christmas seal is the voluntary guard, dedicated to "Protect Your Home from Tuberculosis."

Theo. J. Werle, executive secretary of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, reminds us that we in Michigan now face greater public health problems than in World War I. Yet between 1914 and 1918, Michigan's tuberculosis deaths increased 23 per cent. "If we suffer such a rise here next year it will mean 10 more persons in Michigan die of tuberculosis every week of the entire year," he points out. "This would be in addition to the 33 who at present die each week."

"It would mean robbing children of their mothers, cheating young men of the maturity of which they had dreamed, murdering their children, taking workers from our war industries," he warns.

In order to finance a more intensive attack on the disease, more Christmas seals will be placed in outgoing envelopes this year, Mr. Werle reveals.

The Christmas seal program for 1943 will consist of (1) searching for unknown cases of tuberculosis, through tuberculin tests and chest X-rays, (2) educating children and adults to prevent tuberculosis, (3) aiding tuberculosis research, (4) helping the expatriate to a suitable job.

TALKING THINGS OVER

This photo radioed from London, England to New York and Sound-photized to Chicago last week-end shows a United States army officer, the Stars and Stripes prominently displayed on his uniform sleeve, conversing with villagers in French North Africa. The Yanks are now fighting the Nazis at Bizerte in Tunisia. German and Italian reinforcements are arriving in Tunisia by air and sea.
