War jobs for women predominate in a list of openings announced today by John L. Crain, State Director of the United States Employment Service.

A dozen or more women, 18 to 45 years of age, are needed at once to lace linen fabric over airplane rudders and stabilizers by hand. No experience is necessary and those accepted will be paid while they are learning.

Still listed as extremely urgent among job openings for men is an order for a metal spinning foreman familiar with the processing of heavy-gauge sheet metal.
