

EVANGELICAL CHURCH NEWS

On this coming Sunday, September 26, will be the Harvest Festival Service. It is at this service that all members of the church, friends and all folks of the Community can give thanks and show their appreciation of their bountiful harvest of the past season.

Bring anything that is edible: potatoes, tomatoes, beets, carrots, beans, squash, any kind of produce or apples, peaches, pears, any kind of fruit. If you have none of those, bring canned goods. It is for a most worthy cause, the Onions Home in Detroit. This year, of all years these things will be vitally needed.

Mrs. Applegate and Mrs. Lent ask that all gifts be at the church on Saturday afternoon, so that they may be arranged in the church for a beautiful setting for the Sunday Service. Flowers too will be most welcome to help glorify the Harvest Festival.

Plans are under way for the Annual Bazaar and Luncheon to be held sometime in November. There will be loads of fancy goods, aprons, hankies, pillow cases, baked goods and candy. A grand opportunity to do some of your Christmas shopping. Be sure and watch for the date which will be announced later.

Don't forget the dance at the Town Hall this Friday night, September 24. It will begin at 9 o'clock. These dances will be held every Friday night and are sponsored by the Youth Group of the Evangelical Church, but are for every one in the Community. Make it a family night, parents come and bring your young people and young people, you come and bring along your parents.

There will be a small admission charge, which will include both modern and old-time dancing, and refreshments.

For a really good time, plan to attend these Friday night dances!

CHILI SAUCE WILL BE GOOD THIS WINTER

What is more appetizing than the pungent, tantalizing smell of Chili Sauce boiling down on a cool fall day? Make use of those last tomatoes that are lying out in the garden, catsup "costs" lots of points and Chili Sauce is a very good substitute. I boiled mine down in a little different way this year with very good results. After peeling all the ingredients put them in a large kettle and place in a very slow oven over night. By morning it is of the proper consistency and ready to seal in the jars. There has been no standing over the stove and stirring and the danger of scorching is entirely eliminated.

CHILI SAUCE

1/2 bushel tomatoes
15 large onions—grind
3 red peppers—grind
3 green peppers—grind
6 stalks celery—cut fine
1/2 cup plain salt
3 pounds brown sugar
2 cups vinegar
1 tbs. celery seed
3 tbs. mixed spices—in bag.
Cook all together until thick.

A WORD TO THE WIVES

Hello there—I have written to you before on the subject of working women; particularly mothers, and to add to it here is a very fine article by Lewis Ellis Whittemore, Bishop of Western Michigan.

"War or no war, women must take care of their children. This does not refer simply to babies in arms; it means older children as well.

Neglect of very young children may well result in permanent bodily injury, or physical weakness of one sort or another. Neglect of older children may result not only in physical handicaps, but in mental, moral, and psychic disabilities as well.

The matter is obvious in the case of a mother who deserts her very young children for war work. It is not so obvious where a mother deserts her older children. A woman working in certain shifts cannot get the meals for older boys and girls. She cannot have the house open for them when they get home from school. To gratify her whim (for it is that), she practically shifts the shift for herself. She really puts them out on the street.

Is it any wonder that juvenile delinquency is increasing when parents neglect their fundamental God given duties? A neglected child develops a sense of frustration or of inferiority or of rebellion which may permanently color his life attitude. Such a child may become a prey to various neuro-psychiatric disorders. Or such a child, abandoned by his mother, may turn to the streets for companionship and find himself ultimately facing the probate judge.

Many mothers are lured away from their primary duties not by honest and sincere patriotism but by the glimmer of a uniform, the greed or unconscious money or simply by any excuse to escape the monotonous round of domestic duty.

This is not patriotism, it is unadulterated selfishness. Our country does not need to be saved at the expense of its babies. The most patriotic thing a woman can do for her country is to safeguard the lives of its future citizens.

This does not mean that thousands and millions of women will not go into industry. They will go because they are needed. They will not go until they know that the interests of their children of all ages are properly safeguarded. If that cannot be done, a woman's primary duty to country and to children is to stay home and take care of her family.

I don't now, but from all I've seen and heard of working women, industry and the world in general would be a lot better off if the women would go back in their homes and lock the doors—tight. Bye now.

Drink To Yesterday—Manning and Coles. Adelaide Manning and Cyril Coles say of their book, written in collaboration, "This was intended for a spy book which would debunk the usual spy book. No beautiful enigmatic Russian, no secret password and mysterious signs, but a straightforward description of a job of work, dangerous and nerve-racking, sometimes brutal."

This is the story of an English youth, who during the last war joined the army against his parents' wishes. He was discovered to have the unusual ability of speaking several languages and was transferred to the British intelligence. His missions take him into enemy territory and there he encounters many horrible incidents—His relations with a German intelligence officer and a young girl, who meets a tragic death, adds interest and intrigue to this fascinating spy story.

The Book Of Annals—Alfred C. Hottes. Where the seed catalog leaves off, The Book of Annals begins. It gives a frank discussion of every annual in the garden, explaining its use and hints for successful culture.

Chapters are devoted to color combination, use, seed sowing, transplanting, botches, coldframes, forcing in the greenhouse, with over 100 pages devoted to descriptions of the amateur can understand.

There are a score of valuable descriptive lists of annuals for every purpose—for cut flowers, for fragrance, for seashore, for rock gardens.

At the close of the book, the facts about annuals are boiled down into a compact tabular list and a complete index of annual plant names. The Book of Annals is the most complete work on the subject, yet brief enough, so that one may turn from the garden to the book for quick reference.

Hasty Wedding—Mignon G. Eberhart. Dorcas Whipple, Chicago housewife thought: "Tomorrow is my wedding day and the man I'm marrying is not Ronald Drew." To please her mother and because, deep in her heart, Dorcas knew Ronald was wicked and plotting, she had become engaged to Jevan Locke, whom she had known all her life. Now, the night before the wedding thoughts of Ronald were haunting her. He phoned her and pleaded for a last look at her. When Dorcas went, Ronald was wild, possessive, insanely jealous, and she had to struggle to leave the apartment.

The next morning the headlines screamed the suicide of Ronald Drew. Dorcas would have postponed her wedding, but Jevan quietly but firmly made her go through with it. As they left the church, Dorcas learned that Drew had been murdered. Her husband of five minutes was whispering: "I know you killed Ronald. I don't blame you, he was a scoundrel."

THIS AND THAT . . .

Sure don't know what I'll do when cold weather really comes—have almost frozen to death all through the month of September.

Do you always wonder, when you're waiting in the doctor's office (and do you have to wait now?) what everyone else is going for?

Did you ever plan your day and expect to accomplish just heaps, only to have so many interruptions that everything was in a hubbub by the time evening rolls around? What a futile feeling you go to bed with.

Been seriously thinking of having another baby? Then just have your two young nephews for over a weekend along with four other children, and you will very quickly make up your mind—but definitely!

In the case, cancelled the honeymoon trip and set about proving that either Dorcas or Jevan was guilty. He would have proved his case, if it hadn't been for a murderer's vanity.
