norms, ca., get along with about 3½ square feet a bird.

Overcrowding also results in increased sickness and death losses in the flock. The bad effects of temporary overcrowding lean be reduced by providing more feed hoppers, watering foundains and deeper litter, but culling flocks for remove the drones should not be delayed too long. Although more than four square feet of space is not likely to increase production, less room will creatinly men fewer eggs thar the neck would otherwise lay.
