

BONDS OVER AMERICA

Children play in Esther Short Park of Van Cour, Washington, beneath a heroic statue dedicated to the pioneer women who came with their husbands and children into the Northwest country, newly opened after the Lewis and Clark expedition.

Pioneer Woman

There is little cause for mirth in occupied Europe and even the children have little stomach for play. Millions have been orphaned by Nazi guns or labor camps, all are undernourished and will bear the scars of this war to their dying day.

May Use Double Boiler
For Cream Pasteurization

Cream may be pasteurized in a double boiler. Place the cream container in a pot of water and set it on the stove, stirring the cream occasionally, until the temperature of the cream rises to 145 degrees. The standard practice is to maintain this temperature for 30 minutes. A shorter method is to use 170 degrees F. for 10 minutes. After pasteurization the cream should be quickly cooled in cold or ice water to 50 degrees F. or lower and held at that temperature for at least three hours before churning. Some people prefer to hold the cream overnight at the churning temperature. The pasteurization of cream destroys the bacteria and enzymes which might later cause deterioration of the butter flavor.

Low temperature refrigeration, of course, is best for long time butter storage. Zero storage is used by commercial operators. Cold storage lockers, likewise, are ideal. Where such storage is not available, butter may be stored in salt brine. A common procedure is to wrap butter in pound prints or rolls using parchment paper wrappers. Using the outer wrapper with a string, these prints or rolls are then submerged in a strong salt brine made of boiled water by adding salt at the rate of one pound of salt to four pounds of water. The butter is carefully packed into a crock, weighted down with a plate or clean, hard wood rack and a stone. The brine is then poured in to cover the butter.

Thin Shell Eggs Sometimes
Guide for Hen Culling

The production of thin shelled eggs during the summer cannot be rectified by culling hens to consume more oyster shell or some other form of lime.

In most cases, the birds have been laying for a long period of time and have exhausted their body reserves. Thin shelled eggs may usually be regarded as an index that the bird is about to complete her laying period and this fact should be valuable as a culling guide.

Egg shells are chiefly calcium but are formed when calcium, phosphorus and possibly other minerals are broken down in the process of digestion. Research study also reveals that certain levels of vitamin D are necessary in preparing the minerals for bone and egg shell formation.

If, at any season of the year, the mineral content of the diet is off balance or if an adequate quantity of vitamin D is not taken into the animal body, thin shelled eggs may result. In this case, a high percentage of the eggs laid will have thin shells and the reason for this may be truthfully ascribed to the diet.

Cuts Threads

Keep clothing clean—take care of stains and spots. Dirt cuts threads and will shorten the life of your garment. If clothes have constant care, they'll wear. Follow cleaning instructions carefully.

Summer Capital
At the northern tip of roughly triangular Bengal, Darpeling sits on a foothill spur of the Himalaya mountains. Its 7,000-foot altitude makes it a resort for Europeans trying to weather the sultry Indian summer. It is the summer capital of Bengal and was often in the news as the starting place of expeditions to climb the Himalayan peaks.

Fireproof Wood
U. S. Forest service officials report that the nation's wood preserving plants in 1942 processed 3,755,000,000 board feet of lumber for protection against termites and decay of fire resistance—a level 20 per cent above 1941.

WEST POINT PARK

Mrs. William Zwahlen

Shirley Ault, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ault, Shadydale Avenue, who had been confined to her home ill for several days, was pronounced ill of scarlet fever early last week and a quarantine established. She is reported to be getting along nicely.

Mrs. Margaret Martin went into Detroit Thursday to spend Christmas with her son, Carl Borland and his family.

THE LIGHT

IN THE FRUIT CELLAR

Someone, perhaps Mrs. Jones, went down to get a jar of victory garden tomatoes last evening and forgot to turn off the light. It wasn't discovered until next morning—washday, luckily—when Mrs. Jones started working in the basement.

Ordinarily a small light left burning all night wouldn't be too important. But today ANY waste of electricity is serious because it wastes coal—as well as transportation, manpower, and other critical resources. That is why the Government requests you to conserve electric power—voluntarily—in home and store and office.

Even though electricity is not rationed and there is no shortage in this area, conserve whenever you can, as much as you can. The Detroit Edison Company.
