Amazing Properties
Silica gel, made by the new water glass, with acid-bas containing properties. One part of the coarse, white granulated substance is capable of absorbing almost one pint of moisture from the air without changing appearance. Porosity accounts for it. It has been estimated that one cubic inch of silica gel contains 50,000 square feet of pore surface, about one acre. This material is used today in cloth bags which are tied to military motors and metal equipment to prevent rusting in shipment.

Color Promotes Loyalty
Color is emotional and a creator of emotions, it is said. Pleasant stimulating emotions and emotions of loyalty to employers can be produced by the scientific use of color in factories and other industrial and business establishments.

Defend Your Right
"I do not agree with a word you say but I will defend to the death your right to say it" is usually attributed to Voltaire, but scholars have not been able to find it verbatim in his works and it apparently was attributed to him in S. G. Tallentyre's "The Friend of Voltaire" published in 1907. Miss Hall in a letter in 1935 confessed that she invented it as a paraphrase of Voltaire's words in the Essay on Tolerance. "Think for yourselves and let others enjoy the privilege to do so."

New Products
So great are the advances in the scientific laboratories that almost half of the gross sales of a big company for the year 1943-44 per cent to be exact - consisted of products which either did not exist in 1928 or were not then manufactured in large commercial quantities.

Carpet Duck in War
An enormous acreage of carpet duck for tents, tarpaulins, barracks bags, tropical hammocks and arctic sleeping bags - all protected from humidity and mold by special protective coatings or impregnations - is being produced in American mills and shipped to the far corners of the earth for our Allied fighting forces.
