Indian History
 In a cave on an old Indian camp site, near Bear Mountain, N. Y., were dug up 400 pieces of Iroquoian pottery, believed to be cook pots. Also found were Algonquin slate knives, an axe head, and a polished deer-bone awl. They are possible of sixteenth-century workmanship, according to the American Museum of Natural History.

Save Feed
 Calling out one-third of the layers from the average farm flock will save about 10 per cent on feed costs without sacrificing egg production.
