America Growing Hemp
The production of manila hemp rope—made from the fiber of the cane plant—depended on importations from the Philippines before this war. It is now estimated that the Central American countries will have from 7,000 to 8,000 tons available next year.

Vary Depth of Planting

According to Seed Size
In planting, a good rule to follow is to vary the depth of planting in accordance with the size of the seed.

A good practice is to plant at a depth of four to five times the diameter of the seed. This means very shallow planting for the small seeds and stresses the importance of having a well-prepared, fine seed bed.
Before planting, work the soil with a rake until it is fine, smooth and free of clods and trash.

When planting, space the seeds evenly in the row and be careful not to overplant. When plants are overcrowded the quality and yield will be poor. The next step is to cover the seeds quickly with fine soil to conserve moisture. After the seeds are carefully covered, firm the soil with a rake or foot, being careful not to pack it.

Placing a light covering of peat moss, leaf mold or similar fine, moisture-holding material in a band three or four inches wide over the row will help prevent heavy soils from crusting. Such a covering is especially helpful for weak growing seeds such as carrots and parsnips.

Cold Cooked Potatoes
Used for Many Dishes Cold cooked potatoes have what's needed for many a good and nourishing meal. The homemaker who get the full food value from the cold cooked potato which has been boiled in its jacket. She can plan meals based on the cold potato or be thrifty and use leftovers.

Cooked potatoes are the basis for baked browned potatoes. Slice or chop cooked potatoes into small pieces. Heat a very little fat in a frying pan, add the potatoes seared with salt and pepper. For a crisp crust add about a quarter of a cup of water for four cups of diced potatoes. Cook over low heat without stirring until there is a golden crust on the bottom. Serve with one side folded over the other like an omelet.

Use leftover mashed potatoes as the sides and top for a meat pie.
Fill the center with a well-seasoned slew of leftover bits of meat or fish with vegetables. Put a mashed potato crust on top. Bake in a hot oven until pie is hot through and lightly brown on top. If you have only a little leftover potato, make just the upper crust.
