

Finger Bowl
When peeling fruits or tomatoes, which have been scalded in boiling water, small fragments of skin stick to the fingers and the knife, and then deposit themselves on the surface of the fruit being peeled. To avoid this, place a bowl of cold water at the right of the operator in which to dip hands and knife at intervals. This serves as a large finger bowl and adds to the comfort of the worker as well as increasing her speed of work.

Homemade Crates
For homemade crates, farmers use poplar, basswood, pine, tulip, spruce or willow for the slats, and maple, birch, or beech for the corner pieces and rails.
