One day Caddie and the other children when they came upon a secret board of watermelons, and after the season, too! They had a wonderful party in the hay loft, but the consequences of this adventure were most unexpected.

This is only one of the escapades of that lively family of Woodlawn children who lived on the Wisconsin border in 1860. Caddie herself was the liveliest of the little pioneers, but all the children contributed their share to these stories full of fun and amusing situations. We hear of Warren's gift of came to the preacher.

Caddie's purchase of a widow's bonnet, Emma's part in a Medicine Show, of the gala Independence Day celebration when Robert wins a log-rolling contest and Caddie ruins her new dress. In this family of six active children, each one is a distinct and lovable person.

SABINA — Elizabeth Howard. When Sabina set out for Detroit aboard the Forest Queen, a hundred years ago, she had no idea what lay ahead of her among her unknown relatives. She was not even sure if she would be welcome at the end of her journey.

How she fitted into the surroundings that were awaiting for her, and how she had faith in the young boy, Joel, even when his future seemed darkest, form the thread of the story. And always Sabina and her cousin, Letty, found their thoughts very full of bonnets, crinolines, and taffeta, of romance and parties, to say nothing of a wedding.

The fine characterizations and the fresh focus on pioneer life emphasizing the romance and entertainment as well as the discipline and hardships will win for Sabina an important place among the historical romances for girls from twelve to sixteen.

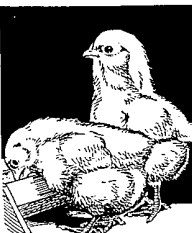

NARCISSE WHITMAN, Pioneer of Oregon. Jeanette Eaton. Narcisse Whitman was one of the first two white women to cross the American continent. Beautiful, blonde-haired, courageous, this girl in her twenties married a young doctor and set out with him in 1836 from her home in New York State for the almost unknown western country which is now Oregon. There was a great purpose—to educate the Indian tribes of that region, and their story is a moving chapter in the record of human bravery and idealism.

The journey itself was formidable enough to deter most women. Beyond St. Louis nearly two thousand miles of wilderness lay between them and their goal. But the Whitmans did reach Oregon and there they established a mission which became one of the first outposts of civilization in the Northwest.

Narcisse Whitman kept a journal and wrote many letters to her family and friends far away in the East. Sometimes it took a year or more for her letters to arrive, sometimes they never reached their destination. But Narcisse's journals, the letters she wrote, and the contemporary memoirs describing her and Marcus Whitman are still available. From this material Jeanette Eaton has woven the touching and inspiring story of a great American woman.

Washing Greens

Washing such greens as spinach, young greens and mustard in slightly warm water helps to remove grit and makes the bugs and worms that might be clinging turn loose.

and Mrs. Gordon Vance of Mayfield Ave., is reported waiting for a call to the Coast Guard.

Why should we fret when a path must be shoveled from house to garage? From somewhere in Burdope Henry Chavey, of Mayfield Ave., wrote that only six inches of snow covered him when he crawled out of his fox hole the morning of the day he wrote.

Net Curtains

Never throw net curtains away just because they are torn. Dip squares of net in cold starch, apply to the torn part on the wrong side of the curtain, and iron with a hot iron. The net will adhere to and blend with the original curtain in such a way that the tear will hardly be visible.
