MISS BACON HAS NEW POST IN ARKANSAS

may be?
Which would you have rather had: a warmish gym and a darling bar or a cool, refreshing breeze and a blown-over counter? Such was the frave decision confronting the kids Saturday night.
the har looked pretty good on the floor, didn't it?

Among the non-finance bills enacted by the legislature was the bi-partisan commission for the state department of agriculture, a reform long sought by farmers' organizations, Michigan State Farm Bureau and the Michigan State Grange. This measure, discussed by this column last December, is modeled after Wisconsin's successful system.

The anti-branch bank bill, center of controversy in recent sessions, finally became a law. Local referredums, once in four years, were authorized on whether the sale of beer and wines shall be permitted on Sundays. A board of examiners was created to hear liquor violation cases, thus relieving the liquor control commission from details of law enforcements. And, of course, return of the state to slow time was an early accomplishment.

The governor was granted emergency powers to control riots and other demonstrations dangerous to public activ without resorting to a declaration of martial law. This measure is designed to remedy a legal handleap which arose in the Detroit race riots two years ago, and it is a tacti admission that authorities are apprehensive of further troubles along Paradis Valley in the metropolis. Generally,speaking, the 1945 legislative session was conservative in its record. A few "radical" bills, including those sponsored by Wayne County C.J.O. members, never got out of committee. They were promptly smothered by upstate solone, one of the balaning compensations or Michigan's legislative set-up.
