These Junior High Pupils Lend A Hand

Clarenceville's eighth graders - and some of its seventh graders - have been doing interesting things during their daily study hour. Between 20 and 25 students have been walking from the junior high to Grandview Elementary School to act as student aides to the elementary students.

Majority Age Causes Change

The admission policies of Schoolcraft College were updated recently because of the new age of majority. Since the age of majority is now 18, the admission policies were revised by the board. Previously a policy permitted admitting students over 21 who were not high school graduates as special students and those under 21 were considered on an individual basis.

The policy was revised to admit those over 18 as special students and younger than 18 after individual consideration.

According to Grandview Principal Albie LaBarge, the student aide program will continue as long as it's "workable."

Classes involved in the project are assisted by one or two students. Participating in the program from the junior high are Dan Aguilar, Liz Amour, Mark Anderson, Colleen Baker, Kathy Cairns, Lois Carignan, James Cooper, Kathy Crawford, Loriane Cunningham, Lynn Fogleman, Jeff Garrison, Sharon Hall, Carole Harris, Kathy Kennedy, Ellen Kozan, Cathy Moore, Dave Meyers, Tom Parker, Mark Preville, Dorothy Rail, Joe Robles, Tina Snyder and Terry Sprader.
