Invented Accadelon
The accordion, Invented by an Austrian anamed Damian in 1829, 'is a larger development of the mouth organ. The firm accadelon can be played in only one key, that in which it originally is pitched, and the bass keys in the tonic and dominant chords. This instrument never is used for music of serious character. It is sopular among the peasantry of some European countries.

has successfully taught many people in other communities to write a beautiful free-flowing hand, who were convinced they could not learn to write. Many such people were between 40 and 60 years of age.

The EARLY-WAY School seeks to prove to this community also, that the success of its system is not limited to the young folks. Contrary to the belief of many the age of students has little to do with their successfully learning to write.

Cervantes once said "The Pen is the tongue of the mind."
Let's help our minds speak more clearly by learning to write the EARLY-WAY.
