CONGRESS NEEDS
SALARY BOOST
Wages are pat the top of the inliation list.

But that doesn't mean more pay for congressmen. One of the best arguments for a boost in the congressional payroll comes from a congressmen whom I won't anne, but whose bitterest rivals mention as one of the suartest members of either chamber. He says:
"The voic gailist a pay rate comes from the men who know that they couldn't get elected, if closer gressional saliaries were high enough to attract a better deads of candidated to oppose them."
Philip Broughten, exnewspagerman and political solentist who has spent a decade in orangesional reorganization has "recrecommended a raise of $15,000 or $25,000 a year. Certainly, it would seem that the same public which can afford 5500 a week for the writers of Grade B movie sceparios can afford a similar sum for those who set politicles that control our national life."

A congressman now gets $10,000
