What Are We Doing . . .

as a small town to contribute? This was the subject of a recent nation-wide Forum broadcast, which we might well consider.

What are we, as well as millions of other small towns doing to contribute to a growing, progressing society? As a small town we have a definite responsibility both to Farmington and to ourselves. We alone are not a powerful force, but small town America is.

This subject was brought to light by the ever growing invasion of small town folks to already crowded metropolitan areas. Why is this trend so great? The answer seems to be that small towns are failing to sell themselves. They are failing to join collectively in a program of practical education designed to hold their young people.

The common expression is "I can't get anywhere here — the grass is much greener over there." Success can be right here if the opportunity affords it. It takes a sales job and small towns haven't taken the time to sell themselves.

What can we do? Make Farmington attractive. Not trees, flowers and shrubs, for we are far ahead of most towns in this respect. Make it a city of opportunity. Every store, every business, every plant and every farm is a training ground — an opportunity to learn. A place where we can prove by practice that we are interested in our young people. A place where we can sell them on Farmington.

We must give them an opportunity to work and to play, to find a future here. It can only be accomplished by organization, backed by a sincere desire to do the job.

If small towns are to maintain themselves, and it is of vital importance that they do, they must tackle the job. If small towns are to assist in cutting down juvenile delinquency they must take an active part in interesting youth in constructive projects.

What are we doing?

More Than A Fortune . . .

more than a giant industry, go with the name Henry Ford. He stands, a living symbol of an ideal — a model of what can still be accomplished with initiative, hard work and stick-to-it-ness.

Tuesday Henry Ford celebrated his eighty-third birthday anniversary. To most of us he represents wealth, success and greatness. These things have become so closely associated with the name of Henry Ford that we fail to go behind the scenes — to go back.

It was not always so. In fact, only a few years ago, he was like any boy today who dreams of success. He carried his dinner pail to school every day and helped his dad with chores on the farm. He fooled around with watches and read with amazement the stories of self-powered engines.

He caught a vision and he held a vision against all odds. He had confidence in himself — in his fellowmen. Henry Ford incorporated a vision with initiative, desire and singleness of purpose. He didn't wait for success — he went after it. He didn't wait the days of frontiers are gone, he opened up a new one right in his own town. He didn't wait for someone to give him something for nothing. He knew success doesn't come that way.

On this, his eighty-third birthday, Henry Ford stands as a reminder to every American that individual initiative and enterprise know no bounds — and success is a challenge — not a gift.

From the OFFICE OF VETERANS' AFFAIRS LANSING

SELF-EMPLOYMENT ALLOWANCES AVAILABLE
Veterans' self-employment allowances are continuing the upward trend that has prevailed since the first of the year. A total of 308,495 veterans filed self-employment claims in May, compared with 33,000 last December.

Under the G. I. Bill, allowances are available to veterans engaged in full time self-employment for profit. If their net earnings for a given month are less than $100, Veterans Administration pays the difference between the net earnings and $100.

The period for which a veteran is entitled to allowances depends upon his length of service in the armed forces, with a maximum entitlement of ten and two-fifths months if the veteran has over nine and one-half months of service to his credit.

Scientists for Unhindered Freedom in Research Work

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

The bomb which leveled Hiroshima and has since been echoing on the Pacific did something to congress that could not have been done before the explosion. It induced the Senate to loosen the public purse strings to the extent of voting to subsidize a national scientific research foundation.

Scientists don't have many votes, so the pressure could not have been put on the bill by the public imagination had been stirred. Suddenly the layman realized that science was a powerful factor in war. He realized too that perhaps men who could smash the enemy might learn how to use the powers of the sleeping giant—atomic energy—for the good as well as the ill of mankind.

At this writing congress has not completed action on the bill but probably will have done so by the time these lines are read. The idea of a national research program seemed very good to me. Therefore, I was somewhat surprised to hear a pharmacologist's authority of my acquaintance say that passage of this legislation "would be as destructive in the field of science" as the bomb was in the midst of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. He made the observation, in a group, several of whom were scientists. His hearers appeared to echo his sentiment.

He had just told the recent Bulletin of the American Association of University Professors. He (Dr. Theodore Koppanyi) said: "In an analysis of the bill, a basic wrong immediately leaps to the eye. This is the assumption that scientific research can be 'initiated' or 'prescribed' for. If this assumption could be grounded, the natural result would be a national research foundation to 'initiate' and 'prescribe' for the composition of music, the painting of pictures, the writing of poems, and the establishment of social controls and education.

He spoke of the recent pogrom in Kielce, Poland, where the Jews were attacked and killed. It all started from a false rumor, a planted rumor. The very same thing, the engineer pointed out, touched off the riots three years ago in Detroit. There are known facts but there is very little public knowledge of what causes such action, how it can be prevented.

POSSESSION IS LAW TO RUSS
Russian expropriation of Austrian property and her delaying tactics in settling of the peace conference date seem to be predicated on the theory: Why start any discussion of who gets what if you can operate on the old theory that possession is nine points of the law?

Possession is an important factor. Take the recent experience of a Philadelphia horse. Around midnight one night a horse walked into a residential district and was taken to a stable.

Few small towns in the United States are as fortunate as Northville because of the fact that Henry Ford, the world's greatest capitalist, has chosen this village as an integral part of his manufacturing plans. Water power is to be developed at the location, and a large plant employing over a thousand men is to be erected.

"Love" will be the subject of the Lesson Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, August 4.
The Golden Text (II Cor. 13:11) is: "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

Among the Bible citations in this passage (I John 4:19): "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (I John 4:19): "Every trial of faith in God makes us stronger. The more difficult seems the material condition to be overcome by Spirit, the stronger shall be our faith and the purer our love."
