Fruit stains should be treated immediately since they are very difficult to remove after they dry. Soaking water is a simple and good remedy if it does not harm the cloth. Warm water may remove some fruit stains. Never use soap. The alkali in it may set the stain and make removal more difficult.

Let Frozen Eggs Thaw
If properly prepared, frozen eggs, on thawing, will return to their original condition. It is best to allow the unopened containers of eggs to sit in a cool place until all of the ice disappears, then use as if they had not been frozen.
