Pre-Dawn Accidents
Auto accidents on Chicago boulevards reach a peak in proportion to traffic shortly before dawn while the morning and evening rush hours have a better auto safety record than other periods of the day, according to the American Municipal association. A survey of last year's Chicago park district traffic disclosed that 38 accidents occurred between 3 and 4 a. m. per 1,000,000 vehicle miles traveled, while during the 8 to 9 a. m. rush hour—when traffic is much heavier—the accident rate was only 4.6 per 1,000,000 vehicle miles.
