Unchanging Looms
Drawings on ancient monuments indicate that hand looms for the weaving of oriental rugs were in use thousands of years ago. Oriental rugs are still woven by hand with painstaking care on primitive looms that have changed but little through the centuries.

A lovely wedding at St. Elizabeth's Church, Detroit, at ten o'clock on Thursday morning, May 1, was that of Mabel Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ross of 3300 Superior, Detroit, and Eugene P. McKelvey, of Farmington. P. Wissert celebrated the nuptial mass, and officiated at the ceremony.
