LATEST WORD IN JACKET BLURB

"The Small Community Looks Ahead" by Wayland J. Hayes, with the collaboration of Anthony Not boy is a book which should be of great interest to every person living in a community such as ours. It has recently been added to the new books now available at the Farmington City and Township Library.

Professor Hayes believes that the small community is important. Not only do millions of Americans live in small places, it is the small places that replenish our urban population, which cannot maintain itself. Furthermore, there was a growing dissatisfaction with big cities even before the atomic bomb was invented.

But life in many American small towns is relatively primitive. If it is to prosper, the small town must acquire the products of modern technology. It must also develop appropriate attitudes, and this is considerably more of a problem. Even when small-towns show themselves eager for new inventions, they usually try to get along with old ideas.

It is to this situation that Mr. Hayes addresses himself, and his observations are certain to prove useful to anyone who cares what happens to our small communities. Following some generalities, he gets down to specific methods by which small-town attitudes can be modified. In particular he writes about the work that has been done by the T. V. A. through its test-demonstration programs, its health programs and its reforestation programs, and about the citizens' workshops sponsored by the University of Virginia, a project in which he participated. The techniques he describes could easily be adapted to the needs of towns that outwardly bear little resemblance to the Southern communities with which he deals.

Mr. Hayes' suggestions have practical value because he understands the futility of trying to put anything over on small-town people. Nothing is easier, he says, than the elaboration of perfect programs for small-town progress. It is even possible for city slickers, with high-pressure methods of bullyhoo, to work up a semblance of enthusiasm. But lasting results are achieved only when the small-town people themselves come to want change. His chapter on leadership gets close to the heart of the matter.

This interesting book and many others are available at our library now. The library is open each Monday and Friday evening from 6:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. and on Wednesday and Saturdays from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. and from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Dick Alexander, Bob Hutton and Gordon Ayres were the winners of the marble tournament sponsored by the Farmington Post 4033, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The winners were presented with medals. Dick, getting first place, was awarded a beautiful gold medal, while Bob, in second place, received a silver medal and Gordon received a bronze medal. Dick is now eligible to go to Eaton Rapids to compete for the State Championship.

Farmington Post 4033 wishes to express its sincere thanks to the people of Farmington and neighboring communities for the liberal way in which they donated to the Buddy Poppy sales. The cordiality tendered to the vendors of the poppies was exceedingly gratifying.

IN MEMORIAM

With a beautiful memory, and an undying love, we write this in remembrance of our darling wife and mother, Opal Irene Campbell, who passed away December 30, 1945. Each morning finds me lonesome

As I wake to face each day,
For a sweet someone who is missing
Not dead, just gone away.

As I avenge each day to end
So many things I find
That bring back dear sweet moments
To this lonely heart of mine.

I often tell your picture
If you need me, call me please,
And I'll be there, yes darling,
And bring my memories.

Each sunset finds me, darling,
With a torn and aching heart,
With memories of years gone by
And my tears like raindrops start

Into each heart some tears must fall
And into each life some rain,
Shall I find peace and comfort thus
Or are my tears in vain?

So darling if you're watching
With that same sweet, loving smile,
Won't you drop in and brighten up
My lonely dreams a while?

And if in life's uncertain path,
God finds another space,
In Heaven fair where you are there,
With you I'd like a place.

Mrs. John Landau fell last Friday at her home on Grand River Avenue, and was badly bruised and cut. She is now recovering at home.
