Vacation Highlights by The Old AAA Traveler

Vacationists by the thousands already are trooping into North Carolina, that fabulous "Land of the Sky" which ranks high among the country's summer playgrounds, and little wonder that visitors are gathering supreme thrills from their exploration. North Carolina packs an immense wallop, combining, as it does, rich history, superlative beauty, a climate like old wine, and a hospitality which appears to be typical of the South.
The fast back from four thousand miles of prowling North Carolina, with Bill Sharpe, chief of the state's Informational service, and certainly we found facets I'd not discovered in more than a quarter-century as a North Carolina fan. We explored the state from bleak Cape Hatteras and picturesque Manteo Island on the east to Cherokee, the all-Indian town on the western edge of the state. We climbed mountains, gazed on the country's greatest courses, rode through miles after miles of flower-bordered trails, swam in its salt water along the Atlantic, ate indescribably delicious southern foods — and I still have the perfume of honeysuckle in my nostrils.
Yes, North Carolina is terrific, no matter what your desire in vacation areas. Seek the history — and you have it in great measure.

North Carolina's world famous "Lost Colony" on Roanoke Island is being presented again this summer after having been shelved during the war years. It is the magnificent story of Sir Walter Raleigh's colony which mysteriously disappeared in the early days of this country, and has been lauded as the greatest production of this kind in the history of American drama.
Look for the beautiful — and you have vistas of laurel and rhododendron and flame azaleas, blue mountains and snowy beaches. If your bent is fishing — well, we hauled in 35-pound channel bass along the coast and found fighting trout in the mountain streams. Possibly you seek only rest and leisure — and you have that in the perturbed shade of spreading forêts.
This year, on romantic Manteo Island, Paul Green's magnificent symphonic drama of "The Lost Colony" will be resumed after the shelving through the war years. That drama attracts thousands from far places, for it is the amazing story of Sir Walter Raleigh's colony of British which disappeared into thin air, leaving only the word "Croatan" cut into the bark of a tree. With that disappearing colony went Virginia Dare, first white child born in what is now the United States.
Over in the edge of the Smokies is the Qualla Reservation on which live almost 3000 Cherokees, colorful Indians who hold closely to their old rituals and who stage an unbroken pageant of color and interest for the visitor. Such picturesque individuals as Chief Card Standinger, world's greatest archer, add materially to the lure of the Cherokee country, and certainly the visitor gets a big kick out of seeing the Cherokee mothers with papoose on their backs parading the streets. Head into the hills and visit with the friendly Indians and you'll eat their foods and hear the legends of that nation which had an alphabet and was circulating written messages when the whites came in almost two hundred years ago.
The Smokies, of course, provide one of this country's greatest attractions, and when you are in Cherokee you're in the edge of those towering peaks and spokes of natural beauty. The Smokies have a wider variety of trees and flowering plants than any like area in the world.
North Carolina is the ideal vacation objective for the Michigan fan, for two easy days of driving take you into its wonder. Take a North Carolina map on the living room wall and hurl a dart at it. Wherever the dart lands is an ideal vacation spot, with everything the vacationist might want. See the great drama of "The Lost Colony" — fish in the Atlantic — follow the mountain trails — visit with the Indians — climb to Clingman's Dome and look out over the great vista of beauty — rest beneath the ancient trees and watch the fleecy clouds in the turquoise sky — see North Carolina.
And I give you my word you won't be disappointed.

CONSOLIDATION OF HOUSING FOR STATE
VETERAN AGENCIES
Effective July 1st, three agencies supported by the state government, dealing with veterans, consolidated housing at considerable saving to the taxpayers.
Because of curtailment in the personnel of the State Office of Veterans' Affairs, space became available in the building at 411 W. Michigan Avenue, Lansing, which housed that agency. As a consequence, the Michigan Veterans' Trust Fund Board of Trustees moved its personnel from the Cadillac Square Building, Detroit, to the Office of Veterans' Affairs location.
The United Spanish War Veterans, who have been located in the State Office Building on Walnut Street, Lansing, also moved into the building. John Stronach, Jr., Department Adjutant, is in charge of the United Spanish War Veterans' offices.
Lawrence J. LaLone, Executive Secretary for the Michigan Veterans' Trust Fund Board of Trustees, is in charge of that agency's offices in the new location. Elmer J. Hanna was recently appointed head of the Office of Veterans' Affairs.
All three agencies may be reached through the same telephone switchboard. The telephone numbers are 2-1221, 2-1222, 2-1223, 2-2626, or 5-8144, extensions 824 and 825.
This consolidation of housing of agencies serving the veteran affords much closer coordination of effort as well as effecting a financial saving.

FLIGHT SCHOOLS
RENEW CONTRACTS
UNDER G. I. BILL
The Wayne County Flying Service located at Kirt-Port Farmington is one of the 223 G. I. Flight Schools in Michigan which have been certified by the Michigan Department of Aeronautics to renew their contract for the 1947-1948 season with the Veterans Administration to enable them to give veterans flight training under the G. I. Bill of Rights, announced Colonel Floyd E. Evans, Director of the Department.
Evans stated further that re-certification of all G. I. Flight Schools in Michigan giving instructions to veterans was necessary to re-qualify under the new provisions of the Michigan Official G. I. Flight Training Curriculum. Michigan is one of the few states which licenses flight schools. Many states require approval from the C. A. A.
More than 115,000 Michigan veterans are enrolled in the schools under the G. I. Bill of Rights, making Michigan the leading state in flight training.
According to reports from the Veterans' Administration, 25 per cent of all flight training in the nation is being conducted in Michigan.
The department also certified 42 private schools, 38 of them conducted by public schools.
