What do the Russians think of of the Baltimore Sun, who got this story from a Russiin, a good Com-munist, whom he met in Moscow. After a few vodkas the Russky used to tell stories. This was one: Stalin and Roosevelt were driving through the countryside. A cow got into the road in front of them and wouldn't more. The driver got into the road in front of them and wouldn't move. The driver tried to shoo it away but it would not budge. Finally, Stalin got out, went up to the cow and whispered into its ear. The cow gave one frightened look, jumped over the fonce and disappeared in the distance.
