Livonia AAUW Speaker

Members of the American Association of University Women Livonia branch will both raise funds and get a first-hand view of how AAUW money is used at their meeting Tuesday, April 18.

The gathering at 8 p.m. in St. Paul Presbyterian Church, 27475 Five Mile, Livonia, will feature a silent fellowship to benefit the AAUW Fellowship Fund and a talk by Miriam Yu of Hong Kong, who is studying on an AAUW grant.

Livonia members have been working on "make it, bake it, grow it or sew it" items for the auction, and these will be sold during the monthly meeting. Then they will have a chance to meet Miss Yu, who is a graduate student in behavioral sciences and education at the University of Michigan.

BORN IN CHINA, she received her BA degree from Lingnan University in Canton and has studied at the University of Hong Kong and at the Seaford College of Education in Sussex, England.

She earned a master's degree in guidance and counseling from the University of Michigan, and now is a doctoral candidate there, planning to teach at the college level in the field of human development and personality.

Miss Yu is a world traveler, a lecturer in parent education and an amateur Chinese painter. While carrying a full load of graduate studies, she also gives frequent lectures and demonstrations to many groups to learn about American people and culture.

Regular AAUW fellowships aid American women who wish to study in this country or abroad, and AAUW international fellowships go to promising women from countries other than America to pursue graduate study or to
