HOUSING PLAN SERVICE, Inc. 226 AUG. 47

THE INGRAM — The home that can grow with expanding family needs a real function in these days of high costs and housing shortage. The most economical expandable house is one that can grow upstairs when more rooms are needed, and that in the meantime provides all the comforts and needs of a complete home on the ground floor.

The Ingram is this intelligent and economical type of "expandable" house. In a floor area approximately 24 feet by 27 feet, it offers a complete four room and bath home on the first floor. Two additional rooms and second bath may be finished upstairs either at the time of the original building or at a later date.

Every downstairs room has two way ventilation. The house lends itself readily to the construction of an attached garage which, of course, might be left off in the interest of economy.

The exterior, with its dignified entrance, four-ered shutters, black capped chimney and dormer window makes an attractive picture. The Ingram conforms to FHA standards and its electrical plan carries the approval of the National Adequate Fixing Bureau. Blueprints and specifications may be obtained from Housing Plan Service, 140 Nassau Street, New York 7, N. Y., at $7.50 per set.

Washington-wise assistants. Joe is a bachelor, and these two women are not taking in either brains or pulchritude. They'd both met the speaker before, more or less professionally, anyhow rather formally.

"Don't worry. I understand your situation perfectly. We'll get the votes anyhow. Forget it!" That man is Joe's friend for life. Some years ago, a magazine took a secret poll of the Washington crowd to determine the most "useful" man in congress.

He was to be judged by his "integrity, intelligence, industry and influence." Joe got the highest vote of anyone in either house or senate.

Not long ago there was one of those big parties here, periodically thrown by various visiting firms. It was a regular stampe, but some way I managed to back Joe Martin into a corner with my two

All right, let's let that go. Agree or disagree with me as you please. If you wanted Eisenhower, you wanted him because you knew instinctively that America and the world need a great leader. Right in this particular kind of leading. Maybe we will get one. Maybe we won't.

SPEAKER JOE MARTIN UNIVERSALLY POPULAR Stassen has certain qualities of leadership which he seems to have impressed the people interviewed by the Paper pollsters. But unless Stassen could "swamp the primaries" — I'm frankly quoting my chief crystal-gazer — he hasn't a chance at this writing.

There doesn't seem to be a chance of his sweeping the primaries, and anyhow there aren't many states which have adopted this device, which it was thought could beat the "smoke-filled room."

Now, the man who is going to be nominated is the man who wins in the Taft-DeWey contest (always, as it will be Taft or Dewey). But it does mean that it will be the man who, although he hasn't enough votes on this prelim, can pick up enough independent votes in later contests to see him through.

At the time of the Taft-Harley fight was at its hottest, a certain Republican congressman came to Joe and said: "I'm sorry Joe, I've got to bolt. My constituents don't want this bill." Joe doesn't argue. He simply said: "Don't worry. I understand your situation perfectly. We'll get the votes anyhow. Forget it!"

At any rate, Joe Martin is a good dark horse to watch. Loose litter on the floor of the poultry house provides better insulation than packed material.
