of money for the 1948 campaign. All of money for the 1948 campaign. All of this has been irritating to the Republican state central committee and to Governor Sigler. It is quite unorthodox for the attorney general of a reform administration to hint boldy of finagling in high places. Black has done just that.

Governor Sigler told Associated Press managing editors at Higgins Lake that he refuses "to bring him-self down" to the level of his feud-ing colleague, Mr. Black.

"Mr. Black is a nice fellow per-sonally," said Sigler. "But he has a peculiar complex. He has swung n many directions. "I do not feel the same way Black does. Should I criticize him publicle?"

As it turned out, not many weeks after I had given up my dream of becoming a Machiaveill or a Meti-ternich. I found myself a caller at six or eight embassles a day—I was put on the diplomatic run because a war had broken out and it was quite as important for beligerents and nervous neutrals to provide news from their points of view as It was for us to collect it.

The butlers in most of the ombassles before World War I would as soon admit a reporter as they would a rugpeddier or a scissory-grinder. It required considerable working over to bring them into line, money and energy amount of time, money and energy

AMERICA'S YOUTH LOOKS UP WASHINGTON DIGEST . . .

This dramatic painting of a boy and his dog tells a story to re kindle the boyhood dreams of many an adult American today. As boyer of the dram being dreams with sines worthy of our American heritage—Paul Rovers and the Spirit of 75. As men and beirs of those great traditions, each election year brings us the opportunity to reaffirm the ideals which have kept America free.

in Russian custody, had identified a jaw which the Russians were toying with as Hitler's. Dr. Plaschke claims the assistant couldn't positively identify it, but he immself feels it must be Hitler's because the magazine ridicules the work as old-fashioned. Plaschke says he did an old fashioned job on Mitter when he made a bridge of 12 teeth in 1934. Plaschke also claims to have studied dentistry at the University of Philadelphia in 1908, Theirmethods have probably advanced since then, but Hitler was old fashioned about some things. Right there, or shall we say in the course of an hour or two, there developed the beginning of a beautiful friendship and the beginning of the end of any illusions concerning a diplomatic carrier. The diplomatic world has not been altogether neglected in the course of meeting deadlines, but when I entered that allegedly romantic demense as I still do in the course of my job, it is by way of the back door, an entrance which, I have discovered, often provides a much more revealing view of the armount of the course of the cours
