County Sportsmen's Club To Hold Freedom Rally

Oakland County Sportsmen's Club members will participate in Oakland County's week of dedication to American principles next week by having Nelson Wetling, Chicago attorney and area director of the Freedom Train as their guest speaker in Bunyan Bowl at Davis R. Wilson Sportsmen's Park, Watford. The sportsmen's outdoor rally will be held next Wednesday evening, August 25.

The Freedom Train is coming to Pontiac Saturday, August 25. Wetling is being flown to the sportsmen's meeting by Gordon Wyrick, of Pontiac Municipal Airport, an ardent OCSB member, who will return him to Saginaw by air immediately after he tells the sportsmen about the mechanical make-up of the 7-car Freedom Train and the precious documents from the archives of America which it carries. All members of the committee bringing the Freedom Train to Pontiac have been invited to the sportsmen's meeting. Rev. H. B. Johnson, of Oxford, former OCSB president and now its chaplain, will be master of ceremonies.

George Grater, of Royal Oak, the OCSB projectionist, will show "A History Of The United States," at Wetling's talk. The film is the story of a Yank's dream while in England.

The sportsmen's rally is called for 7 p.m.

The Freedom Train will stand Saturday, August 25, on the San Antonio Street tracks of the Grand Trunk Railroad in Pontiac, between Oakland and Cass Avenues. During all of next week civic, religious, fraternal, patriotic and labor and industrial organizations will devote their programs to Rededication Week — to the principles of America.

Vacation Highlights
by
The Old AAA Traveler

Flower-bordered trails in Shenandoah National Park, Virginia, beckon the visitor into the beauties high in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Horseback riding is one of the many summer pastimes.

VIRGINIA

Virginia is little less than terrific in these summer days, and teacher and student alike will find high interest in leisurely prowling that old state through their vacation days.

Trying to tell the story of Virginia and her glory in one yarn is an impossible task. It just can't be done! For that Virginia is a vast panorama of beauty and glory and romance and adventure. It is a tapestry of magnificent, mostly in threads of red and gold — the red of high courage and great adventure, superlative devotion and heroic death, and the gold of love, love of country and love of God.

Be it Richmond, patinaed old Williamsburg, gentle and gracious Roanoke, or the natural beauty of Shenandoah National Park, Virginia will thrill the summertime visitor to his or her very fingertips. Virginia is all beautiful and all entrancing.

There is Charlottesville, county seat of Albemarle County. In its history the town goes back to 1781, when the British Colonel Tarleton raided it in an attempt to capture Thomas Jefferson then Governor of Virginia, and the legislature, which had taken refuge after being forced to leave Richmond. The picturesque Capital, Jack Jouett was in a tavern in Cuckoo, 30 miles to the east, when Tarleton passed with a detachment of British cavalry. Suspecting the raid, Jouett rode into Charlottesville to give warning, arriving only a few minutes before Tarleton's detachment arrived. Jefferson and most of the legislators escaped to Staunton, but seven of the legislators who delayed were captured.

Today Charlottesville is probably more noted for "Monticello" and "Ash Lawn", both architecturally and historically important. "Monticello" was Jefferson's home from 1770 to 1825, when he died. Jefferson began the mansion in 1770 and two years later, when he was only 23, he carried across the threshold his bride, the beautiful Martha Skelton. Here Jefferson died on July 4, 1826, 50 years after the Declaration of Independence.

Jefferson's tomb is on the estate and now is a national shrine. Two miles away stands "Ash Lawn", with its imposing statue of Monroe in Carrara marble and the world-famous boxwood garden. "Ash Lawn" was designed and built for Monroe by his friend and neighbor, Jefferson. The original house stands today mellowed by age and cherished by those who dwell to the atmosphere of old times. Yes, "Ash Lawn" ranks high among America's unforgettable.

Every phase of early American life is presented here. The boxwood garden, now famous as one of the loveliest in the country, has grown in beauty and charm with each decade since the tiny plants were first set in their places under Monroe's direction. Towering above this century-old box is an oak estimated at three hundred years. No doubt to its venerable protection is due the fine preservation of this historic garden. Beyond the vista of boxwood rises the Norwain pine, now more than 125 years old, which Monroe brought from abroad and watched over with such care that it now stands as a giant guarding his home and memory.

Within this evergreen setting of his own design has been erected the impressive marble statue of Monroe, which was presented by the sculptor, Piccirilli. It is a handsome portrait with a romantic history of its own.

When you go into Virginia, of course, you will see a great deal more than the grand old estate. You will want to spend some time in Williamsburg, one of the most entrancing spots you'll find in all the world, and you will want to stroll the hallowed ground of old Richmond. Lexington is, of course, a "must" in any Virginia visitor's book, for in Lexington you find famous Virginia Military Institute — a gloriously beautiful Washington and Lee, the Washington and Lee beneath whose chapel sleeps Robert E. Lee. VMI, of course, is one of the most famous schools in America, having sent forth to war many immortals, including "Stone wall" Jackson and Secretary of State George Catlett Marshall. A score of men who wore the VMI gray were general officers in World War II.

In the summertime Virginia is indescribably beautiful, especially through its Shenandoah National Park and along its Skyline Drive. In some of those areas you find the country very little changed since the days of Washington and Jefferson and Madison and Monroe and the other great and near-great. You will see the picturesque little mountain cabins and you will hear mountain music which has never been put on paper — music brought from England and Scotland and Ireland and passed down "by ear" from generation to generation.

Virginia is one of Michigan's favorite summertime play-places. Especially for educators who want to see, face to face, the myriad historical highlights they have been parading before their followers over the years. Go into Virginia this summer if you can, and I give you my word you will return to your homes better Americans in having explored the country where the very seeds of the America we know today were sown and where they were nurtured through the perilous years when the United States was in swaddling clothes.

Rural Tele-news

SIX OUT OF SEVEN FAMILIES — 85% of the homes and business establishments within Michigan Bell's rural territory can have telephone service without paying any construction charges. Today's liberalized rural construction plan allows one-half mile of free line-construction per applicant beyond existing lines.

SAME WIRES — MORE CALLS — By means of special equipment, one pair of wires in effect becomes six pairs, carrying six separate conversations simultaneously. Michigan Bell has in operation several such experimental lines using this new equipment, known as "telephone line carrier," which may prove helpful in serving rural areas.

PARTY-LINE COURTESY PAYS OFF — Rural telephone service is good service, particularly when everyone co-operates by spacing out calls... being careful to hang up the receiver after each call... not interrupting when others are talking, except in an emergency... and by giving up the line when others have emergency calls to make.
