DIGEST . . . .

One was Jim Hagerty, trained reporter himself, who is expected to be the public relations secretary in the White House. The other was man who probably won't be in Vashington at ait—Dewey's veteran olitical adviser, Edwin Jaeckle. There was no conflict between he two, a rare situation indeed.

There was no conflict between the two, a rare situation indeed. Jaeckle supplemented Hagerty. This would seem to contradict the sharp charges of Warren Moscow, author of "Politics in the Empire State" which came out this fail. The next day at the White House news conference, Hoover said he would not comment on the meeting though the notice had appeared in the papers), and that he considered it the duty of the press not to print anything which was only partially true, or else incomplete. Richard Ouilhan of the New York Times, one of the most beloved and respected correspondents who ever covered Washington, and an outstanding leader, made at typically displified, but very emphatic protest then and there. He made it is not to be a single protection to get any complete a story as the complete a story as the complete in the pression to get any complete the theory of the complete is not yet and the very complete the three pressions of the president's wishes. SHOW CHAMPIONS Show officials point out that farm youngsters have long taken top places among winners in the classes of the International. Last year the grand champion steer and barrow, two of three major abov champions, were shown by youngsters in competition with adult men from throughout the continent.
Auctioned livestock shown by boys and girls brought over half a milliton dollars at last year's International sales.

statement after the conference.

I have known other examples of short-lived gag rules. One which Secretary of the Treasy Morgenthau tried to establish on the treasury. He issued an order that none of the treasury officials could talk with newmen. He might as well have told the reporters not to read the market quotations. It failed. Legitimate news continued to be reported as it always had been.
Franklim Roosevelt had, at on

The President refused at first, but the reporters insisted. Finally he agreed to give out an official statement after the conference.

it always had been.
Franklin Roosevelt had, at one time, at least 30 per cent of the newspapers "against" him. He knew he couldn't change heir editorial views by giving out news to their representatives. He also knew that if he tried to withhold news, he American pepole would be far less likely to support him. And because he understood the meaning of the freedom of the press, he wouldn't have thought of trying. And he knew how to make it appear as favorable as possible.

pear as favorable as possible.

The most effective check in a democracy is not the first, second third but the fourth estate. An uncallightened public conceivably might elect a totally bad president and a totally bad congress which would establish a totally bad supreme court, but unless the press is gasged, the public in a democracy cannot be democratically unenlightened. pear as favorable as possible
